THE GREAT ESQUIMALT UFO CAPER

The Case of the Esquimalt UFO was brought firmly back to earth Friday night.

Residents were intrigued by an eerie light piercing the sky in the early evening and kept police and newspaper switchboards busy.

Old-Time Politics 'Lesson' For Dave

NELSON (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett went back to the people who elected him, touring Friday in near-campaign style.

He took a lesson in politics from a long-time socialist in a private hospital and met soon-to-be civil servants at the Celgar pulp and sawmill in Castlegar.

The premier's political lesson came from Joe Willis, 85, a long-time left-wing activist, who campaigned for Socialist candidates in the early 1900s. Willis was one of dozens of patients at the Willowhaven Private Hospital with whom the premier talked and joked.

Emerging from his meeting with Willis, Premier Barrett turned to newsmen outside the room and said: "You guys should have been in there for a real lesson in British Columbia history."

The premier arrived here in the second stop on a nine-day meet-the-people tour of the province.

The premier's first stop was the Celgar pulp and sawmill where he said he got a "very favorable response" from the workers concerning the government's planned takeover of the mills from its owner, Columbia Cellulose.

"We are very pleased with the enthusiasm the men on the job have towards the purchase of Columbia Cellulose," he said.

The premier told a press conference later in Castlegar he does not think the government will have any trouble bargaining with the workers on contracts.

"We're another employer as a crown corporation and we hope to be a good employer."

Barrett also told the news conference he is pleased Cominco is investigating going ahead on its own with a copper smelter in the Kootenays, but he said the government will not extend any financial aid to help the company build the smelter.

"Cominco doesn't need any hand-outs from us," the premier said, referring to the former Social Credit government's plan to lend Cominco money to establish the smelter.

However, Barrett added, "we would be happy to go in as a partner."

At a $10-a-plate dinner here Friday night, Barrett attacked the "late unlamented political machine" of the Social Credit party, as he stood

Embassy's Orders Killed by Flyers

BANGKOK (UPI) — U.S. air commanders in Thailand have cancelled a number of bombing strikes requested through the U.S. embassy in Cambodia because of danger to populated areas, military sources in Thailand said today.

The sources disclosed the high-level review policy for Cambodian air activity after U.S. senate staff investigators issued a report in Washington Friday that the United States has been flying an average of 242 air sorties each day over Cambodia at the direction of a command post in the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh.

The sources said that as a result of the review at Nakhon Phanom, a number of strikes requested by the embassy in Phnom Penh had been cancelled. They did not give any details of the number of such cases.

They said that two reasons for cancelling strikes were closeness of the targets to villages or other areas where civilians could be hurt, and designation of the strike zones as "cultural areas" where ancient temples are located.

Post-strike reconnaissance pictures have been taken of about half the strikes flown in Cambodia, the sources said. They said there was no indication of damage to civilian areas in the photos.

The sources contended that reports of civilian injuries were exaggerated, but at the same time conceded that in some areas there could be small numbers of civilians not known to be present.

There had been criticism that U.S. air strikes in Cambodia have caused large numbers of civilian casualties in recent weeks. The sources in Thailand contended there were safeguards in effect to prevent such casualties.

PANEL REVIEW

According to the sources, requests for air strikes in Cambodia are fed through the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh, where a mixed civilian and military panel goes over them. Requests that are approved are sent to Nakhon Phanom Air Base in northeast Thailand.

At Nakhon Phanom, headquarter of 7th Air Force Commander Gen. John W. Vogt Jr. since his departure from Saigon, the requests are gone over again. The sources said reference is made to aerial reconnaissance photos and, in cases where there is any doubt, a forward air controller (FAC) in a spotter plane is sent for a look at the area.

Civilian Prisoners Swapped

Times News Services

BIEN HOA — The Saigon government and the Viet Cong exchanged their first civilian prisoners today, a day after the deadline stipulated in the ceasefire agreement.

The exchange was delayed by a four-hour dispute over the number to be released.

The South Vietnamese, who had announced they would release 400 prisoners, freed only 100, including 35 women. There was no explanation.

The Communists released 63 prisoners loyal to the Saigon regime, including four women.

The Saigon command said more Communist civilian prisoners will be released Monday.

In Saigon, meanwhile, the Viet Cong denied today for the first time that any of their soldiers shot down a helicopter belonging to the international ceasefire commission in which nine persons died when it crashed April 7.

Col. Duong Dinh Thao, a Viet Cong spokesman, told a news conference that Communist units in the area where the helicopter crashed near Khe Sanh were questioned and it was found that none of them fired on the helicopter.

He said the cause of the crash has not yet been positively determined, but suggested that if the helicopter was shot down by a missile, then it was the South Vietnamese who were responsible.

U.S.-BANNED DRUG ON SALE HERE

MONTREAL (CP) — Prescription drugs and patent medicines banned in the United States are still being widely sold in Canada, the president of the Quebec Pharmacists' Association said Friday.

Yves Comtois, whose organization groups 1,000 drug store owners, said, "there are at least 200 products on our shelves that have been withdrawn for various reasons in the U.S."

Examples of medicines sold here but withdrawn in the U.S., he said, were Achrocidine, Tetrax-APC, Bradosol, Spectracin T and Roboxisol.

Nixon Slips Away Again

Nixon left Washington late Friday by helicopter after returning from an aerial tour of the flood-stricken Mississippi river valley and a dedication ceremony in Meridian, Miss. The White House said he was alone except for customary personal service aides.

With the Watergate scandal taking priority over all other problems facing him, Nixon scrubbed a White House meeting today with top-level advisers on inflation and other economic matters.

Despite reports that he was about to toss overboard key aides such as H. R. Haldeman, his chief of staff, and John D. Ehrlichman, his chief domestic adviser, Nixon invited both key assistants along with him on his Mississippi trip Friday.

He seemed to be expressing his public support for the two aides, despite disclosures that they may have been involved in the cover-up of the Watergate case in which Democratic campaign headquarters were "bugged" prior to last year's presidential election.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren said Nixon would probably be in touch by telephone today with Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and other economic aides, but that it was unlikely any major actions or statements would be made public until the president returned to Washington. He was expected to remain at Camp David at least through Sunday.

With two resignations since Thursday — Jeb Stuart Magruder, former deputy director of the committee to re-elect Nixon, and acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray — most observers were waiting for more to come.

"No matter who was involved in the matter (Watergate), there will be no sparing of anybody," Nixon said as he named William D. Ruckel-

AMMO CARS EXPLODE

ROSEVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — A string of boxcars loaded with ammunition and possibly bombs exploded today in a series of shattering blasts, forcing families to flee their homes and sending giant mushroom-shaped clouds billowing in the air.

An ambulance service reported at least 22 hurt, and a spokesman said the injured were being taken to hospitals.

The Sacramento County coroner was called to the scene but there were no immediate reports of deaths.

Police sealed off a five-mile radius area round the explosion scene, a Southern Pacific switching road. Railroad spokesmen said the depot and nearby homes had been evacuated.

"It sounded like a series of repeated blasts, like a war," said one young women resident who fled her home three miles from the SP yard. "There were huge white plumes of gray smoke, like mushrooms, one after another. Each blast shook the earth."

Authorities said no one was allowed near the scene because of the fear that some of the boxcars contained liquified gas.

Southern Pacific said the train was moving from Hawthorne, Nev., to the naval weapons station at Port Chicago, Calif., a shipping point for ammunition headed to the Far East. It included 21 cars of ammunition.

Bilge Dumping Charge Laid

Bob Baird, district marine surveyor for the ministry of transport, said today the case will come up in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

The 13,000-ton Baknes, which sailed for Australia just after midnight, was charged late Thursday after MOT officers boarded her in Victoria and conducted an investigation.

Baird said she is charged under the Canada Shipping Act and oil pollution prevention regulations with discharging oil or an oily mixture into Canadian waters.

The incident is alleged to have occurred between Lion's Gate Bridge and Point Grey off Vancouver as the Baknes sailed for Victoria earlier Thursday.

Maximum penalty on conviction is a fine of $100,000.

Baird said he did not think any oil reached the shore.

The ship is owned by Nile Shipping, is registered in London and is operated by Denholms, he said.

'Conspiracy' Doubles MD Pay

MONTREAL (CP) — Government health authorities are afraid of doctors and, under a "conspiracy of silence," have allowed them to more than double their incomes during the last 10 years, say two researchers who've been looking into medical incomes.

Dr. Samuel Wolfe, a Canadian teaching medicine in the United States, and Dr. Robin Badgley, chairman of the behavioral science department at the University of Toronto, told a meeting Friday of the Canadian Public Health Association that federal and provincial governments have "a deliberate conspiracy of silence" to keep the public from learning the truth about doctors' high incomes.

Governments are afraid of doctors and of possible doctors' strikes, they told the meeting.

As well, the doctors who do the most work are not, under the existing fee-for-service method of payment, necessarily those who get paid the most, the two researchers said. The fee method is weighted in favor of those who do surgery and technical procedures rather than the family doctors.

The two doctors recently completed a book on the medical profession and medical income, called Family Doctor. It is to be released shortly and many of the statistics from their studies will be included, Dr. Wolfe said.

Average yearly medical incomes for doctors receiving fees rose to $50,800 gross in 1970, compared with $24,300 in 1960, the two doctors said in their speech. The net income for doctors receiving fees was $34,000 in 1970, compared with $15,700 in 1960.

Differences between the earnings of doctors and of other professional workers such as dentists and lawyers also widened in the 10-year period, Dr. Wolfe said.

"The average net income of a taxable Canadian worker was $4,000 in 1960 and $6,500 in 1970," he added. "Physicians earned four times as much as the average workers in 1960 and five times as much in 1970."

What's more, said Dr. Wolfe, their studies have shown that doctors who see patients quickly and carry out more procedures instead of talking or listening with their patients earn more.

In other words, some doctors can "rake-off" the system, getting more for a lower quality of care.

The doctors said that because the medical care insurance commissions have more doctors representatives than public representatives, the administrators become "handmaidens to the interests of the medical profession."

"Governments are weak in negotiating with a strong profession, a stance singularly opposite to that taken in dealing with school teachers, universities or low-paid hospital workers."

Information has been deliberately withheld from the Canadian public by both federal and provincial governments, they said.

"Each province gets reasonably good statistics, tends to hide the information from the public, but makes it available to the doctors."

Dr. Wolfe, now a professor of medicine at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn., was one of the health officials in Saskatchewan who helped implement the first government medical care insurance program in North America. He more recently has been a consultant on proposals to introduce more community health centres.

They said the "fee-for-service" method of paying doctors encourages abuses of the medical care insurance system and raises health costs.

It also leads to unnecessary visits for patients and probably even some unnecessary surgery, the two researchers told the Canadian Public Health Association meeting in a joint presentation.

BRA HAZARD

LONDON (UPI) — Brassieres will be banned when girls of the British Broadcasting Corp. meet their male colleagues in a rugby match Sunday, organizer Jim Newson said today. "It was decided that the bra wires could be dangerous," Newsom said. "The girls have been training seriously and want no holds barred."

BUTTER WORSE THAN BOOZE

COVENTRY, England (Reuter) — Eating butter is worse for your heart than drinking liquor, a medical conference was told today.

The finding resulted from a survey of blood composition among people living in London, Naples, Geneva and Uppsala, Sweden.

Londoners appeared to have a remarkably high level of cholesterol and other blood fats generally credited with causing heart disease. In Naples, the blood fat levels were particularly low.

Reporting the survey to a meeting of the British Medical Association, Dr. Barry Lewis of London's Hammersmith Hospital said fatty foods, carbohydrates and alcohol have all been identified as agents for increasing cholesterol.

But the difference between London, where butter and other fatty foods are popular, and Naples, where wine is cheap and plentiful, showed that "booze is less bad than butter" where the heart is concerned, Dr. Lewis said.

Late City Addict Refused Methadone

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Del is 20 and says he has been on heroin about eight months, ending up with a four-to-five cap a day habit.

He wanted to quit so he went to Victoria's methadone clinic where he got his first dose of methadone Tuesday after the usual 10 days of urine tests and counselling.

Each day, he concedes, he was a bit late for his appointments, five minutes the first day, 10 minutes Friday.

But Friday he was told by a counsellor that being constantly late just showed he is not really interested in kicking the habit through the local program.

He says he was refused his methadone, told he was off the program and to come and see Dr. Jim Laing, the director, Monday when his case would be reviewed.

Del says he has a job, in pipeline construction, to go to in the interior in a week but he needs to be well enough to hold it. A week more on methadone won't cure him, he admits, but should make it possible for him to hold the job.

The rigid rules of the methadone program mean he has now been told, in effect, to cure himself. It means he has been done out of a job.

There is the veiled suggestion from him, too, that he is going to have to do something — maybe criminal — to get the money to buy the heroin he needs.

His friend Don, a former addict who doesn't think much of the local program either and says he kicked his habit in Edmonton, says it's good to have rules but you can't run a methadone program on an assembly-line basis.

Del is losing a golden opportunity, Don says. You can't do heroin and work too.

In three days they expect me to clean up my act, Del says. From years of no rules in his lifestyle to suddenly being asked to take part in a morning and afternoon activity program.

Even getting up by 9:30 in the morning was a total change for him, he says.

A counsellor at the methadone treatment centre offers a different story.

Del was always late; throughout the "intake" program and all this week for his methadone and the morning and afternoon activity programs, counselling or outings.

Sample: it wasn't a question of 10 minutes late Friday; it was half an hour.

Last Tuesday he arrived at 10 a.m. when he was to be there at 9 to see the doctor.

About five weeks ago the program was made compulsory, she said.

Why?

"We found the con job and manipulations go on and on and we're not treating anyone, just giving free dope."

Heroin addiction is more — a psychological problem too. The counselling, activities and outings are all part of the treatment.

THE BIGGEST BOMB JUST BIG FIZZLE

BELFAST (UPI) — An 800-pound bomb, the largest ever used against the British Army in Ulster, was exploded by remote control and wrecked an armored car in County Fermanagh today, but caused no injuries, the army said.

"Only an error in timing saved them," an army spokesman said. "Fortunately somebody pressed the button a shade too early."

In Belfast and Londonderry, where security forces were alerted for possible violence, masked and uniformed members of the militant Protestant Ulster Defence Association blockaded city streets in an hour-long demonstration protesting the extradition of a UDA member to the Irish Republic on a double murder charge.

It was the first show of strength by the UDA for almost six months but passed off without any violence, police said.

Kidnapped Six Days, Boy Freed

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A 10-year-old boy was released by his kidnappers today, police sources reported, six days after he was abducted and held for a reported $50,000 ransom.

A family friend said the boy had been released "safe and sound," but declined to give further details. The parents and the boy went into seclusion in a friend's house just outside Beunos Aires.

Originally the kidnappers of young Daniel Lopez demanded $5,000 ransom, which the boy's working class parents paid by scraping together funds from friends and neighbors. Later the kidnappers increased the ransom demand to $50,000. The police sources did not disclose whether the parents had paid the increased ransom.

The kidnappers had threatened to cut the boy in two pieces and send the parts to his mother and grandmother.

shaus, head of the environmental protection agency, to temporarily take over as acting FBI director.

In Los Angeles, columnist Jack Anderson said he believes Nixon himself gave the orders which led to the Watergate affair.

Anderson, in an interview with radio station KFWB, said the orders probably were of a general nature and that Nixon may not have known of the illegal methods used in carrying them out.

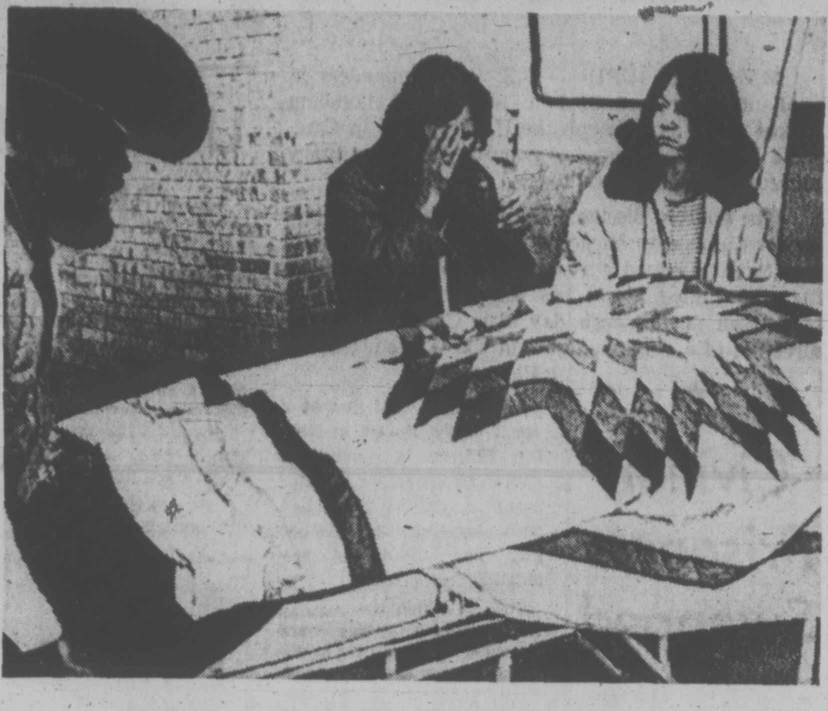
Republican lawmakers and leaders joined in a rising chorus of demands and warnings that a delay would weaken Congressional support for Nixon's programs.

Rev. Billy Graham, a close friend of Nixon, along with 1936 presidential candidate Alf Landon and Chesterfield Smith, president-elect of the American Bar Association, urged the president appoint an independent investigator or commission to clear up the case.

Smith termed Watergate "a domestic crisis of unparalleled proportions" while Landon could not "think of anything worse affecting the leadership of the country."

The General Accounting Office in Washington also urged that the justice department move swiftly on reports charging Nixon's campaign committee with "apparent violations" of the elections act.



Wounded Knee Casualty

Rose Peoples cries as the body of her brother, Lawrence La Mont, 31, a Pine Ridge Reserve resident, is removed from ambulance at hospital in Pine Ridge. La Mont was killed Friday in exchange of gunfire between militant American Indian Movement forces and federal officers. La Mont is second A. I. M. supporter to be killed since Feb. 27.

IWA HEAD CONFIDENT

The president of International Woodworkers of America Local 180 said today he is confident members will analyse alternatives and reject a bid by a rival union to win representation rights at three island mills.

Fernie Viala, of Duncan, whose local represents 4,500 members from the Malahat and Port Renfrew north to Parksville, said the union's position has been that if the Pulp and Paper workers of Canada complied with the terms of the Labor Relations Act, employee representation votes should be taken at the mills concerned.

The labor Relations Board at a hearing Wednesday ordered votes to be held at Ladysmith Forest Products, Mayo Lumber and CIPA Lumber, the latter two mills at Nanaimo.

But the board rejected the PPWC's application for a certification vote at Saltair Lumber near Ladysmith on the grounds there were not enough PPWC members in good standing.

The PPWC wants to replace the IWA as bargaining agent at the four mills.

Viala said disallowing the vote at Saltair justifies the union's suspicions there were "inaccuracies" in the plup union's applications.

"We are confident that the IWA members involved have analysed the disadvantages and inconsistencies in the promises made by the plup union leadership. They preach plant or mill autonomy in Port Alberni, yet are attempting to organize the sawmills in Ladysmith and Nanaimo into Local 8 of the Harmac pulp union.

"The members recognize that this would be a total loss of their autonomy in those mills. The disadvantages of splintering and weakening our strength are obvious."

The IWA is negotiating revisions for many categories in the sawmills which will result in substantial increases in take-home pay for members as well as a further increase of 36.5 cents an hour on June 15 this year, he said.

"We have also negotiated a pension plan completely paid for by the company that will be portable into IWA operations in western Canada. This means no IWA member will be tied to any given employer under the threat of losing his pension upon leaving his job."

Viala said "the spectre of the seven-day work week, compulsory weekend work at straight time pay, loss of four regular statutory holidays a year and other inferior conditions found in the PPWC contract" leaves him confident the membership will remain loyal to the IWA. PPWC president Fred Mullin said his union is sending a letter to Labor Minister Bill King protesting IWA claims of irregularities which were not elaborated on at the labor board hearing.

Mullin said this was a "strategy" employed by other international unions when challenged by national unions and asked that King "take a measure of control" so that charges must be substantiated before a hearing begins and "fishing trips should not be allowed."

The PPWC's Local 8 represents 1,000 employees at the Harmac pulp mill just south of Nanaimo. Success in the three mill votes would add about 350 members.

Liverpool Draws, Clinches Title

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool clinched the First Division title in English League soccer today when it played to a scoreless draw with Leicester City.

Liverpool fans had been celebrating all week, but it was mathematically possible for their team to lose heavily against Leicester and yield the title to Arsenal on a goal average.

Arsenal won 2-1 at West Ham.

Arsenal as assured of finishing second after third-place Leeds United lost 3-1 away to Southampton. Leeds, which meets Second Division Sunderland in the English Football Association cup final next Saturday, was without six regular players because of injuries.

on the New Democratic Party's legislative record.

He reviewed the NDP's legislative achievements at the spring session point by point and challenged the opposition parties to campaign against that record in the next provincial election.

The audience of 350, responded vigorously as Barrett ridiculed the Social Credit party for what he continued to call their "me-too" attitude towards NDP legislation.

He told the audience to "remember at the next election to ask opposition candidates "will you do away with car insurance?' and they'll say no way.

"Ask them 'will you withdraw Bill 42 (the Land Commission Act)?' and they will say no way."

Barrett also said B.C. government has begun investing some of its money in credit unions for the first time, Barrett said.

The premier said the government last month invested between $3 and $4 million with credit unions so they can expand their money-lending capabilities.

FORT RODD HILL ACTOR HAS DEMANDING ROLE

If there was such a thing as an actress-of-the-year award for birds, my nominee for 1973 would be a little lady currently performing out Fort Rodd Hill way.

Without the fanfare that apparently is an essential part of any nomination for that other well-known acting awards presentation, this petite ingenue plays her role enthusiastically, drawing every ounce of pathos and joy inherent in the part.

Her only hope of reward is success and, in this case, success means shepherding a family of four safely through those first perilous days of life.

Her role is the demanding, 24-hours-a-day part of a determined mother, ready to risk life and limb for her offspring. It's big scene, performed almost daily, is one that would test the histrionic prowess of any Davis, Kelly or Kerr.

My award nominee is a mother killdeer and her show-stopping performance, the broken wing act.

On the chance that said broken wing act isn't as well-known as I suggest, here's a run-down on a fairly typical routine:

Curtain rises — stage centre a bird's nest, almost invisible among the wood chips and gravel of a typical west coast beach — standing solicitously over the nest of a robin-sized bird (the mother killdeer).

At villain's sudden appearance, bird silently moves 2 or 3 feet from nest — stands motionless — contemplates potential threat to her nest.

Villain stumbles stage centre, unaware of either bird or nest.

Bird suddenly breaks into a run — villain now sees bird — bird flops on ground, spreads tail to show rust-colored rump — flaps wings grotesquely — utters a shrill nervous twitter — villain staggers towards bird — bird recovers enough to flop a few more feet — villain persists in chase — bird repeats performance — villain, undeterred, presses on.

Sequence repeated several times — meanwhile danger now a hundred or more feet from nest — bird now breaks off display — rises in full healthy flight and derisively calls as she leaves stage — villain stands perplexed — scratches and shakes head — departs stage left — curtain falls.

The Fort Rodd Hill performance closely follows this classic routine but occasionally, it becomes a two-bird show as the male enters the scene. While he may put his whole being into his portrayal of the dutiful father, he must gallantly relinquish the starring role to his mate. Despite his best efforts, she always steals the show.

Theirs is a time-worn act that has been staged, apparently more often successfully than not, ever since man and killdeer crossed paths. It's one that has worked equally well for most other egg-stealing or young-eating predators.

But what of threats like horses or cattle. They're not egg-stealers but they have been known to accidentally step on nests.

For this kind of threat, killdears, instead of trying to lead the danger away from the nest, simply stand their ground. By intimidation, fluffing and rustling their feathers and uttering the same shrill trill, they manage to steer the big-foots away from their eggs.

Crows and gulls, and other avian egg and young stealers, have a performance reserved for just their kind of threat. Here the role calls for a low profile, play it cool, let the natural ally of camouflage do its part, kind of thing.

Now, just by standing still and remaining completely silent a killdeer can win its Oscar.

NDP Hits Food Cost Board

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government should enact legislation giving it the power to order price roll-backs or to stop proposed price increases, the New Democratic Party said Friday.

The party said it found the Food Prices Review Board announced by the government, unacceptable because the board has no teeth to cope with the job of holding down prices in Canada.

Terry Grier (NDP — Lakeshore), spokesman for the NDP on price controls, blasted the government for its soft approach to the problem of inflationary pressures.

"As a response to the problem of rising food prices, the government's announcement is seriously inadequate. If it is intended to constitute the government's full and considered position then the NDP members on the Food Prices committee of the Commons find it unacceptable," said Grier.

He acknowleged that the government had acted to set up a prices review board and the board appeared to have been given powers to investigate unsual price rises and to report publicly and recommend action.

But as a government policy to contain food prices, it is incomplete and unsatisfactory, he added.

Former CIA Man Saw Assassination Cable

By LAWRENCE STERN

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A former Central Intelligence Agency operative in Vietnam said Friday he saw a copy of an alleged cable linking top Kennedy administration officials to the assassination of South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem.

The ex-agent, Louis Conine, said he was shown a copy of the document by William Lambert, former investigative reporter for Time Magazine, last December.

"The thrust of the cable was a strong recommendation that the Junta (of anti-Diem generals in Saigon) would be better off without the presence of Diem and Nhu (Diem's brother, Nog Dinh Nhu) alive," Conine recalled.

Conine, who was deeply involved in last-minute efforts to spirit Diem and Nhu out of South Vietnam to political asylum in November, 1963, said he had never seen such a cable during his official tenure in Vietnam.

"When I read the copy of the cable, I was shocked," Conine recalled. "I have never seen a cable so explicit. You don't say things like that. But I assumed at the time it was real. The wording was beautiful."

The issue of secret cables of instruction from Washington on the Diem-Nhu assassination was injected into the Watergate case Friday. Sources close to the investigation said that former acting FBI director L. Parrick Gray destroyed documents which implicated the late president Kennedy in the assassinations at the direction of presidential aides John Ehrlichman and John W. Dean III.

Investigative sources said the cables were fabricated by Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr., and ex-CIA agent.

There was no evidence that the document in Lambert's possession came from the Hunt file.

Gen. Maxwell Taylor, who was chief military adviser to President Kennedy at the time of the assassinations, said Friday that he, too, was shown a copy of the cable by Lambert. He said he could not specifically recall the contents but was certain that he had never seen such instructions in the course of his official duties.

Lambert, who is now writing a book and is on special assignment for the New York Times, said the source of his material was not Hunt. "Whether the same material might have been in Hunt's hands is another question. I suspect it might have been," he said.

The former Time Magazine reporter said that he and Conine were well-acquainted with Hunt. "I am not concerned that this document was forged or otherwise spurious," said Lambert. "No other reporter to my knowledge has seen the cable."

Lambert declined on grounds of confidentiality to disclose the source of the material.

Conine said the copy of the cable he saw bore the names of prominent Kennedy administration officials. He acknowledged that his memory of the names on the alleged cable may not be precise — he saw it four months ago — but he recalled those of former Secretary of State Dean Rusk and national security adviser McGeorge Bundy as being among the names listed.

The former CIA operative, whose cloak-and-dagger exploits in Indochina dating back to World War II were legendary, said he could see no reationale for a Washington directive or even suggestion that Diem be killed.

Fresh Breezes in the Harbor

Costs of the Causeway improvement program are mounting, the doubled width of the lower promenade having brought that phase of the development to well over half a million dollars—at least half of it, and perhaps almost all, to be paid by the provincial government. After more than a century of bridges and Causeway, it is more important that what work is done in the area be of the highest quality and concept, than that any plans be hurried through merely to get something done.

Mr. Arthur Erickson, the architectural adviser retained by the city, has come up with some attractive ideas, but has drawn little agreement with others. Victorians, accustomed to the action of the tide in the Inner Harbor, are wary of any plan, for instance, that would enclose the water in front of the Causeway. The presence of drains and harbor-bottom mud could result in a continuing problem. In any case, the familiar sight of yachts in the harbor is much preferred by city residents. And the proposal for a water-side open-air theatre on the north bank of the harbor conjures thoughts of the chilly southwest winds that prevail here. The stands at Athletic Park and the University campus were faced in the opposite direction with those winds in mind.

But such ideas, if not acceptable in themselves, should be treated as springboards to further novel suggestions, for no progress will come from an attitude that rejects everything new on principle. On the other hand, it would be folly to build problems into the Causeway environment, already a most attractive one with its background of the Empress Hotel and the Legislative Buildings. The planned major development in the form of the Reid towers may prove to be a planned major error. What else is done around the harbor edge should conform to the general appearance of what we have developed over the years. The basic harmony is there, and anything that is added should be in tune.

Incidentally, Mr. Gorst, the MLA for Esquimalt, in discussing harbor development costs, has given an opinion which should be noted in a much wider context. He says that, inasmuch as the provincial government is "being asked to pour money into this area," it is only right that it "should have some planning influence." What he means is that whoever pays the piper calls the tune.

It is a truth that is frequently forgotten by municipal residents in their eagerness to acquire provincial financing for various local constructions or activities.

Where provincial financing of welfare, hospitals, schools, educational programs, assumes a large share of the total costs, then it is natural that the government should want a voice in how the money is spent. Autonomy can be sold, even though the vendor may not realize it at the time.

A Time of Slackened Guidelines

City Council's not quite unanimous vote to refuse a business licence to the would-be proprietor of a shop to sell appliances and materials for various sex purposes undoubtedly would be paralleled by any vote of the community as a whole. There can be little public desire to see such a retail outlet in the city. Yet Alderman Bawlf, who opposed the motion to refuse and thereby destroyed the legally necessary unanimity, had a point in regard to the method of rejection.

Most persons would feel a natural disinclination to have such junk made available in a city shop, but is personal repugnance a sufficient reason for rejection when one holds an official position? If the proprietor's activities are legal, and already condoned in a number of other Canadian cities, has he a right transcending the demands of good taste recognized by the aldermen?

It is a question of basic rights rather than one of moral content, much as the latter may over-ride the former in most people's minds. The question of morals these days is in such a state of flux that it is difficult to determine what is permissible and what is not. The chaotic situation regarding censorship of books, pictures, movies and other products is a case in point. What was unacceptable yesterday is found to be commonplace today; what is banned in one country or city is permissible in another.

In the absence of a workable consensus the question of moral behavior is becoming once again a decision for the individual. The final answer to the sort of shop projected for Victoria would be given by a refusal of virtually everyone to enter it. If Council does find it necessary to grant the licence after having given the applicant a chance to present his case, it is pleasant to believe that this particular flower would soon wither in Victoria's climate.

ART STOTT

The Anguish of a Pack Rat

When the visiting young grandsons return from their forays on the beach, they usually bring back with them small treasures they have found there. Conventionally they are specially shaped pieces of driftwood which boyhood's imagination has converted into rifles, burp guns, bazookas or revolvers. It is their custom to approach their grandfather in a skirmish line of two, break into staccato imitations of automatic fire and shoot him to doll rags.

Then, restoring him quickly to life, they present their arms for inspection, pointing out the particular features of each and asking where they can put them until they make their next assault. He shows them a convenient place on the back porch. They enter the house, absorb themselves in the television cartoons and forget their weapons. When they have departed, the weapons disappear, either recycled back into the salt chuck or, if suitable, converted into starters for the open fire.

Only on occasions when they visit again do they wonder what happened to their guns.

Nothing Discarded

Without surreptitious redistribution of their armament wealth, the house walls would burst like an over-stuffed carton. They're pack rats — unhappily, by heredity. Their grandfather was before them. For all his lifetime to date he has found it impossible to throw anything away.

Now comes the moment of agonizing separation. In a few weeks he is moving into smaller quarters and there just isn't enough room in them to harbor all the accumulation of this man's worldly goods.

He bled when he started to dispose of books, some of his own — those of little consequence which he had saved — and others he had inherited. A bookcase holds only so many volumes. He hopes he has allocated the excess to men who will show them a certain appreciation, if not the tender affection he wrapped around almost anything in print with hard covers.

Worse is to come. In the basement are mementos folded into precious memories. An old box contains pipe fittings from that bygone day when most plumbing was done with galvanized iron. Some have stripped threads, some elbows are split and some lengths are so corroded a wire can't be pushed through them. Still, the longer ones could have been used to stake up the peonies, the unions could have extended handrails and at least one of the elbows served a historic purpose. With an old broom handle jammed into it, it became the grandfather's first golf club — not much whip in the shaft and no certainty of accuracy in the head. Still it drove a ball up to 100 feet on the Rescue Bay plain which is now almost completely covered by homes. Somehow it never produced a Ryder Cup competitor from the boy who used it.

B.C. Provincial Museum

Nature's Original

There are bits of old hardwood salvaged from the tide and stacked away. Never know when you're going to need a piece of oak for a special job — though no such special jobs have occurred in the last 50 years.

And in some dark recess, so carefully secreted he can't find it, there is a small flour bag of agates collected from the North Beach of Graham Island on a childhood trip to the Queen Charlottes. These were to be the base of later fortune, the beginnings, and substantial beginnings, of a gem collection — or at least the decorations that were to go into some modern Taj Mahal. For a while they served a useful purpose to support the Chinese lilies our vegetable man used to give us in the distant times of itinerant Asiatic pedlars. The vegetable man has gone and the lily-giving — even the lichi nut presentations — are only obscure memories. The gem collection has never materialized.

There are saws down there that won't hold an edge, others that have cracked or bent blades. There are hammers with broken claws. There's an irreparable Yankee drill that has waited half a century for reassembly that cannot be made. But you never know . . .

Treasuries

The walk-in closets upstairs are treasuries. In them you can find a Kodak that leaks light, but has a marvelous lens, genuine leather club-bags that hit you behind the knee when you carry them and feel fully loaded before anything is put into them. There's a tin of fishing tackle bestowed by the grandfather's grandfather — small hooks from which the moths have eaten the feathers and hackles, bobbers too small for local fish, line too brittle to tie. A few objets d'art fashioned by young hands at manual training share company with Christmas tree decorations that need a little fixing, clothes that fight valiantly against moths, old shoes that hurt, a couple of chests of drawers — one of them in fine condition — and pictures, snapshots, albums, electrical fixtures that are no longer electric.

And the time has come to say to all of these, tearfully: "Sorry. There's no room in the new inn."

The time has also come to realize that accumulation of material things is a disease of our times, and that a man is rich in ratio to the simplicity of his wants.

The transformation of a pack rat has begun. He divests himself of worldly goods and sees, faintly, the counterpart of a local Gandhi, slightly uncertain of the degree to which possible future spiritual riches he may acquire will replace the material possessions he has cherished so long.

MAURICE WESTERN

Gold in the Federal Creek

OTTAWA — In contrast to many of its bickering and ill-humored predecessors, the federal-provincial welfare conference has been marked by relative harmony and a measure of goodwill altogether appropriate for Easter time.

No one doubts that the new spirit owes much to Marc Lalonde and his working paper. This in itself is a remarkable development. Only yesterday the eminence grise of an administration regarded as stony-hearted by most provincial ministers, Mr. Lalonde has emerged as a father-figure with helpful views on financial matters and a flair for the felicitous phrase.

When things go badly at such conferences and ministers depart with sulphurous words, there is usually a federal official available to make the point that strains and tensions are symptoms of health in virile federations. But harmony, being seldom abundant, is even better and has the not inconsiderable merit of lightening the work burden of those who write communiques.

Heart Balm

It has been known for years that there is nothing like money or its equivalent to soften the hearts of provincial ministers. The problem is to find it. This difficulty is normally grasped more readily by federal representatives than by their provincial counterparts; hence the recurring, although unpopular, Ottawa theme that there are limits to what can be extracted from the indivisible taxpayer.

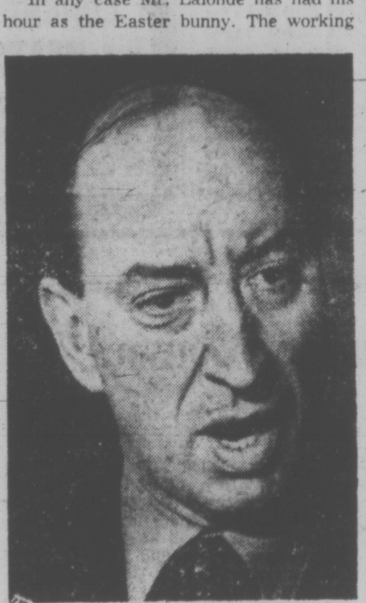
In tackling this difficulty, Mr. Lalonde has been remarkably successful. His colleagues in government have been brought to the realization that what was impossible last year is gloriously possible only a few months later. Somehow they have been persuaded that there is still gold — plenty of it — in what they looked on erroneously as a worked-out creek. Not only has Mr. Lalonde found it, he is ready, as shown by his policy paper, to spend it. In the eyes of his provincial associates he has acquired the stature and the popularity of the man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo.

Some meed of credit may also be due to the general taxpayer; after all he has made it possible although his contribution may be temporarily overlooked in the inter-governmental festivities of Easter week.

Mr. Lalonde, as the genial redistributor of national wealth, is confident that more abundant handouts will not involve higher tax rates. The validity of this argument will, of course, be tested by experience. But, if the minister is right, the federal good fortune must owe something to the remarkable tax reform of Edgar Benson. It is becoming more and more clear that, in the search for equity, the government was not unmindful of its own future convenience and widening role as dispenser of benefits to presumably grateful citizens.

At this stage it is somewhat awe-inspiring to consider the possibilities of over-taxation which would have existed had Mr. Benson's original revenue calculations not been challenged, especially by the suspicious tax experts employed by Ontario.

In any case Mr. Lalonde has had his hour as the Easter bunny. The working paper, consisting as it does of 14 propositions and a glowing commentary, is not particularly specific. But it radiates hope of good things to come; an outlook all the more promising since it is the work of a minister who has already coaxed his cabinet colleagues into new spending commitments exceeding $800 millions.



MARC LALONDE
. . . father-figure

It has been Mr. Lalonde's good fortune also that propositions, of the sort to be found in the paper, are less divisive than actual plans for splitting the bills. The welfare ministers have only begun their negotiations and, in the natural course, a good many months will pass before we come to the time of sharp pencils and tempers, corrosive adjectives and the healthy federal tensions of which we are perennially reminded by thoughtful constitutionalists.

Money is not everything, even in the relations of 11 governments. Mr. Lalonde has a keen eye for the felicitous phrase; his vision having been sharpened in prepolitical days by observation of the impact on provincial ministers of the other variety. Much of what has been said, although of virtuous intent, has grated on provincial administrators since they have read into it the unwelcome implication that it is Ottawa's role to determine priorities even in provincial fields.

Mr. Lalonde has now emerged as the advocate of a new flexibility, already illustrated in practice by the federal government's remarkable shift on family allowance policy. The same spirit animates the guiding principles which he has submitted to his provincial colleagues. Two are particularly noteworthy:

It must be recognized that provinces may wish to have the structures of social security vary in accordance with the social needs, income standards and the cost of living in different communities.

Even the baby incentives may vary, which shows how flexible Ottawa can become, as hope springs anew in a season of political diversity.

Finally, it must be accepted that the reconsideration of Canada's social security system must be conducted jointly by the federal government and the provinces. A better social security system can only be realized if a reasonable consensus can be reached . . .

Provincial Insistence

A number of provincial governments have been insisting on this for a long time. In fact, there is much to be said for it, as Mr. Lalonde recognizes.

While it is not invariably the case that provincial governments, being close to the people, are wiser than Ottawa, proximity does have one advantage. Messages from the grassroots tend to come through more quickly and in less garbled forms. It would be difficult to find a better example than the case of the Ontario energy tax which fluttered only briefly before being stuck down in the very week of this federal-provincial get-together.

The new willingness of the federal government to seek a consensus ensuring wider latitude to provinces faced with differing situations is presumably good politics. It is also good sense. In this respect Mr. Lalonde's paper is persuasive. For while the ability of Ottawa to spend on the grand scale is not in question, the competence of the central government to determine provincial priorities is another matter and much in doubt.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

On Mill Hill, off Atkins Road, many changes in the flora have occurred since spring began.

At the parking lot there you can find shrubs and trees that were introduced by the old suppression crew.

There is a black cottonwood now breaking into leaf and giving off that wonderful perfume, "Balm-of-Giliad." There, also, is a fine specimen of the Douglas maple. Look closely at the tiny seed already formed. See how different the leaves are from our native broad leaf maple.

There is also a sitka alder there. Take note of the difference in the catkins and the cones. There is an abis amabilis (lovely fir), with needles grooved on the upper side and two white lines on the underside.

Just across the road you can spot several specimens of the striped coral root, which belongs to the orchid family.

In the clearing the dandelions form a golden carpet. Have you noticed that there is an abundance of this plant everywhere you look this year?

As you walk up the trail, see how the spring gold has changed. In many places the yellow petals have fallen away and left a beautiful pattern that looks like a misty, fragile etching.

The blue-eyed Mary has now put on its long stem growth and the plant seems to have changed, while the tiny monkey flower has all but vanished.

Growing in the rock cracks there are some fine examples of the golden back ferns.

Scattered beside the trail are a number of the blue camas growing. This plant is slowly beginning to vanish from our landscape, yet at one time it was one of the most dominant plants of the more open places. Do you know that the Indian people used this plant's bulb as one of their main sources of vegetable and protected them? I think that the last two fine stands are at Beacon Hill and Uplands parks.

Take a look at the garry oaks and you can see their catkin-like flower now in bloom. The creamy arbutus flower is also showing.

When you get to the summit, the view is well worth the climb. One can look out and see the Strait and Victoria in the distance, while the everlasting misty hills to the west beckon with that mystery of new adventures to find.

One can look down upon the highway and see a steady stream of cars. One wonders where everyone if going and why the rush to get from A to B.

The PoWs: No Question Of Courage

By PETE HAMILL
New York Post

The troops are well home now, at least the ones who wear the uniforms of combat. (Some 9,000 plainclothes soldiers remain in South Vietnam, in the employ of the great Gen. Thieu.) All the prisoners of war are back.

Perhaps now it will be possible for Americans to examine some of the more treacherous current pieties without being accused of playing easy with the lives of those beloved American "boys" whom the politicians have always been so fond of sending off to fight strangers.

Specifically, it would be in the interests of America to begin de-mythifying the PoWs.

Every night now for weeks, we have seen these men on TV. The torture stories have come with an increasing well-orchestrated crescendo, at least three a day, at precisely the time that Richard Nixon is in large trouble over skyrocketing prices, ITT-Chile, Watergate, and the unconstitutional bombing of Cambodia.

This is not to say that torture did not take place. It is to suggest that the torture stories are now being used, the way the PoWs have been used all along: to cover up other matters.

We have to start with one premise: the PoWs would not have been tortured if they hadn't been in North Vietnam in the first place.

The great majority of these men were pilots. They were not drafted. Nobody tore them out of their homes and told them they must go and bomb North Vietnam. From 1966 on, the moral issues of the war were clear, and those men still chose to get into airplanes and bomb North Vietnam.

They justified their acts by saying they were acting "under orders." But at any point, they could have resigned from the armed services. They could have refused to bomb the North. Instead, they chose to go off and bomb people from 50,000 feet.

In the process of doing this, they were shot down. They were captured. They were interrogated. Some were tortured. Some died.

When the survivors were finally released, most of them looked a lot healthier than most of the people in the South Bronx. They are, in fact, the healthiest looking crowd of prisoners of war in history.

At one of these Pentagon-sponsored press conferences someone should ask them what they think would have happened to a North Vietnamese pilot if he had been shot down over Bay Ridge while bombing the U.S. I would guess that the guy would have been beaten to death on the spot.

This is not to question the individual courage of the prisoners themselves. Courage is simply not the question.

I know courageous men who ended up in New York prisons; I know a lot of courageous young men who went to federal prisons because they refused to kill strangers for their country. There are courageous Americans in exile in Canada. Jane Fonda, for all the easy shots some of the PoWs have taken at her, has shown great courage, too, risking her career and her life to speak out against barbarism.

The question isn't courage; it isn't even torture, although the torture stories are making it easier to justify the bombing of Cambodia and the American tour of Gen. Thieu, whose "tiger cages" were not exactly models of penology.

The issue is whether the American people will ever accept the truth. The PoW show, sponsored by Richard Nixon's Pentagon, is blurring one simple truth: that those men would never have suffered so much if they had not been bombing North Vietnam in the first place.

The PoWs are almost all professional military men, which is precisely why we should not take their current judgments too seriously. Most of them have been out of the real world for the past five or six years; before that they inhabited the equally unreal world of the professional armed services.

Their remarks about peace demonstrator, Jane Fonda, Cora Weiss, and others who were working to get them out of prison are not to be taken too seriously. They are men, after all, who believe in the essential nobility of killing for your country.

The Nixon administration has now moved these men into politics, exploiting them in precisely the way the president promised he would not exploit them. But that makes it the duty of all of us to scrutinize them as toughly as we would anyone else involved in politics.

Nixon is promoting some of them to generals and admirals, which means they will be helping to operate the military machine for a long time to come. If we continue to play Hail the Conquering Hero, it will not be long before the same men are operating again in another war which we could stumble into as dumbly and arrogantly as we stumbled into Vietnam.

Vietnam is over for us, but we are still bombing Cambodia, and it will be tough to raise a cry again for the pilots who are shot down near Phnom Penh.

Schreyer Tests Durability

By PETER DESBARATS
Toronto Star

Now that the possibility of a federal election this spring has been all but eliminated, the attention of all parties is turning toward Manitoba where NDP Premier Ed Schreyer will call an election this year, perhaps as early as June.

The Manitoba campaign will attract widespread interest for a number of reasons.

Schreyer's narrow victory in June, 1969, was the beginning of an NDP advance in the western provinces. Two years later, the party defeated a Liberal government to regain power in Saskatchewan where it had been dominant from 1944 to 1964. Last year, British Columbia was added to the fold to give the party unprecedented strength at the provincial level.

Schreyer's government will be the first of the three to ask voters for a second mandate. A failute to achieve it would be taken as a sign that the party has lost momentum in the west. It would be particularly ominous for British Columbia which, like Manitoba, has no previous history of socialist government.

Although the NDP's provincial strength in the west failed to tanslate itself fully into federal votes last October, the party's "alliance for progress" with the minority Liberal government in Ottawa is bound to be a minor theme for the Manitoba campaign.

After Lewis

Finally, Schreyer himself is often mentioned as a potential successor to NDP Leader David Lewis. Although he is the youngest of the western premiers at 37 years of age, his political career extends back to 1958 when he was first elected to the Manitoba legislature.

He gained five years of experience as a member of the House of Commons before he resigned in 1969 to lead the party in Manitoba. He is also one of the two bilingual premiers in English-speaking Canada, the other being Hatfield of New Brunswick where the proportion of French-speaking voters is much higher than in Manitoba.

Schreyer's durability in Manitoba politics is related to his essentially conservative nature. Unlike Barrett of British Columbia, he doesn't flaunt his socialism in the face of his critics; and in a recent conversation in his office at the Manitoba legislature, he recognized that "the image would be one, perhaps, on the conservative side."

"I suppose I'm in the same position as Walter Lippmann," he said, referring to the American writer and political theorist. "In his younger years, he was regarded as a very obvious liberal in the American sense of the word.

"But after 50 years, one by one, the things that he thought were important for society to do, through the instrumentality of the government, got done.

He doesn't flaunt his socialism

'A Conservative'

"Then he found himself in the position of wanting to ensure that these things would be conserved. So, in a precise sense of the word, he became a conservative.

"I can see the same kind of thing happening in my case," said Premier Schreyer, quickly adding, "but you know, there are still a number of things needing to be done."

The full elaboration of Schreyer's future concerns is contained in a three-volume publication entitled Guidelines for the Seventies, probably the most elaborate pre-election exposure ever released by a provincial administration. But Schreyer himself, during our conversation, focused on the questions raised by Eric Kierans in his recent report on resource development for the Manitoba government.

"While I would like to keep the Crown out of small business activity," he said, "we must be willing to take risks to ensure that resources get developed for the public domain.

"My own preoccupation now is the fact that, in the last generation, we have been completely negligent as a nation in the way in which our resources have been developed, particularly our non-renewable resources.

"Through timidity in both the private ahd public sectors, we have allowed foreign-based ownership with an investment of about $10 billion, most of which has already been repatriated, to acquire ownership to about $50 billion in proven reserves, and who knows how much more in terms of estimated reserves.

"There's where the great preoccupation should lie," said Schreyer, "and not so much with the tax treatment of the manufacturing sector."

In his whole approach to the "corporate rip-off," Schreyer seems to be a blend of NDP Leader Lewis and Finance Minister John Turner.

"My own feeling," he said, "is that the corporate rip-off was too general an issue.

"In the real world, there is a corporate rip-off but it is taking place in certain sectors of the corporate economy, not all of it. I would say that there sure as hell is a corporate rip-off in the resource development sector, a tremendous one, but would you say that there is one in the manufacturing sector?

"I doubt it very much."

Pre-campaign speculation about the Manitoba election has focused on Liberal Leader I. B. Asper, despite the fact that his four-man group in the legislature is far smaller than the 20-member Conservative Opposition. Asper's energetic western attack on Canadian financial and political structures has stimulated speculation about a resurgence of Liberal strength in Manitoba.

"I regard that as completely out of the question," said Schreyer in a rare venture into political forecasting.

"The nature of Manitoba's political make-up is such that there is no way that the Liberals will replace the Conservatives. The Liberals have no standing in rural Manitoba. The Conservatives are not about to lose their support in the south end of Winnipeg and we are not about to lose ours in the north end.

After Watergate

WHAT TO TELL THE KIDS?

By DAVID S. BRODER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At our house these days and, I suspect, at many others, there is a good deal of earnest between-the-generations talk about Watergate. Not since the violent summer of 1968 has it been so difficult for an adult to face the blunt question a teenager asks: "What kind of a country is this?"

It is a hard question, for no one can be unshaken by the developing evidence that systematic political espionage was planned and concealed at the highest levels of our government.

Yet even in the despair this news evokes, one must assert that it is wrong to say that Watergate proves the rottenness of American politics. This kind of conspiracy is emphatically not part of our politics and those who are responsible for it cannot legitimately justify themselves by claiming their actions were "just politics."

Let's go back to some fundamentals. All government, as the Conservatives properly remind us, is a reflection of man's imperfection. The American system of government, with its elaborate system of checks and balances, is designed explicitly to curb what the founding fathers rightly saw as the inevitable tendency to abuse of power by those in authority.

But the promise of a republic achieving civil order, justice and liberty does not lie wholly in the negative restraints on power embedded in its constitutional and political system. That hope is also rooted in a positive belief — which our history gives us confidence is valid — that ordinary men will meet their public responsibilities.

"Responsibility is a tremendous engine in a free government," said Thomas Jefferson, and the shameful humiliation of his democracy by the men responsible for last year's subversion of the election process should not blind us to the enduring truth of Jefferson's maxim.

Indeed, what finally occurred to me to say to the teen-agers, in our house, was that Watergate itself has shown the capacity of ordinary men and ordinary politicians to meet their responsibilities.

Take Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, whose skillful cross-examination forced the unfortunate L. Patrick Gray to disclose the White House's interference in the Watergate investigation. Is Senator Byrd a noble character? No, indeed. He is a politician, a product of one of the shabbier and more scandal-prone of our state political systems. He is an orphan who grew up in a coal-field poverty. His earlier political career is studded with examples of narrow-mindedness and even prejudice.

GRAY

But as his power has increased, his vision has broadened. As majority whip of the Senate, Byrd understands that he has responsibilities beyond those that were his when he was a state representative from Sophia, W.Va.

Pat Gray could not understand that as FBI director, he should not behave like an underling on the White House staff. Their confrontation was both inevitable and appropriate, and it showed that the American system can work.

Take Judge John J. Sirica, whose persistent questioning of witnesses in the criminal case finally broke open the conspiracy of silence. What manner of man is he? A man of the most ordinary cloth. A son of Italian immigrants who worked his way through law school, became a Republican lawyer in the democratic district of Columbia and was rewarded with a judgeship when Dwight Eisenhower became president.

Say what you want to about the men who concocted this campaign of political espionage and then tried to conceal it. No epithet could be too strong. But our system and the politicians in it are better than that. They are a lot better, as they have been proving again, even in this ugly situation.

That is what I tried to say to our teen-agers. But I don't know if they were convinced — or should be. It left me wondering what the president tells his kids.

Othello Just Not Sexually Mature

RUSSELL BAKER

Everybody is so enlightened these days about relations between the sexes that relations between the sexes hardly seem like relations anymore.

It is sad to see them going the way of baseball, but the hardest part is composing the notes to notify old friends of their obsolescence. I have just mailed such a note to poor dear Othello.

My dear old friend, I said, you can be no more distressed than I to learn that jealousy is regarded by the great majority of young people interviewed for The New York Times as hopelessly passe and definitely tiresome.

To have killed dear Desdemona for jealousy. How cruel are the whims of time. In the ultimate enlightenment at which we have now arrived your "tragedy" no longer merits the attention of sexually mature youth.

Demanding fidelity was selfish of you. Did you not see that trying to own another's body would make you nothing better than a slave master? I regret, dear disguided old Moor, that you would seem relevant to us today only if you had had the wisdom to share her liberally with Cassio and the Venetian Senate, and to release your own suppressed desires more healthy by bedding Iago.

It will be harder writing to Caesar. He can be vindictive in reply. It will never do to put the case plainly, to tell him outright that it is simply old hat for anybody, but especially Caesar, to have a wife — much less a wife who is above suspicion.

"Julius," I might say, "enlightenment must eventually overtake us all — even Caesar."

Writing to Penelope was rather fun. Ulysses, as you know, has been caroming around the Mediterranean for years having a ball while poor, simple-minded Penelope sits home in Ithaca resisting suitors. I told her about swinging.

Let us face it, my dear old straight Penelope, I told her, the day when wives sit at home at Ithaca while hubby cuts up at conventions from one end of the Mediterranean to the other — those days have given way to enlightenment.

Unless you want to be the joke of the late 20th century you had better tear the suits off a few of those suitors this coming weekend and stop being so uptight about your natural healthy desires.

If the tone of this note seems brassy and coarse, it may be because I have just finished writing to my great old friend and idol, Romeo Montague. My greatest ambition had always been to burn with a monogamous passion so fierce that I might climb the highest balcony.

Forgive this embarrassing confession. I intruded it only to indicate how hard it was to break the news to Romeo.

It was all just damned childish silliness, Romeo, I told him, trying to strike a virile note. Machismo is important to Romeo with his Latin blood. His favorite writer was Ernest Hemingway.

You made too much of sex, Romeo, I told him. And what is sex? As we now perceive, thanks to our enlightenment, sex is only sex, a sigh. A handshake can be far more vital, Romeo, because as we now know, the important thing in life is not sex but communicating, and there can be more communicating in a simple handshake than in all the balcony climbing in Verona.

Oh, Romeo, oh, Romeo! It was so — so — so straight of you to insist on getting married. I mean, Lord! A friar even! A church ceremony!

If you had wanted to speak to us here in the enlightened lavender twilight of the 20th century, Romeo, you could have done it so beautifully, just by getting together with Mercutio and Tybalt and Paris and Juliet and some of the other Verona girls who hung out around the fountain, and gone off to Rimini and lived in a commune. But married!

That was the hardest letter to write. To the idol after whom one's own life had been patterned. It had not seemed such a bad life until then. Not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, perhaps, but it seemed likely to do. And now, the enlightenment . . .

Ah, well. Who gets the bad news next? Emma Bovary.

"Poor dear Emma: Dreadful news —."

Sweet Success in 50 Acres

VANCOUVER (CP) — The sugar that sweetens the daily menus of some two million Canadians in Western Canada originates on a 50-acre plot of land in the Fraser River delta south of Vancouver.

On the plot British Columbia Sugar Refinery Ltd. raises about 400,000 pounds of sugar beet seed used to plant, under contract, more than 57,000 acres of Alberta and Manitoba farm land.

For Forrest Rogers, chairman of the board and recently retired president of B.C. Sugar, the seed plot and a long-ago tussle with Javanese pirates are part of the romance of the company's growth from a struggling beginning in 1891 to a business grossing $81.7 million in sales in 1972.

Before the Second World War, B.C. Sugar bought its beet seed from Germany. "Forced to look elsewhere, we decided to raise our own," says Rogers, the youngest of four sons of the founder of the company, B. T. Rogers, all of whom have served as president.

The family link remains strong. Rogers has been succeeded as president by his grandson, P. A. Cherniavsky.

Cultivation of sugar-beet seed is a two-year cycle. The beets are left in the ground until the second year when they sprout large pods from which the seeds are extracted for production. It takes seven pounds of seed to plant an acre of farm land and Alberta farms alone use 240,000 pounds a year.

DEVELOP BETTER SEED

Company agronomists, chemists and researchers combine talents in a never-ending hunt for better seed strains. It is one measure of their success that beets produced from delta seed are considered a failure unless they contain 17 to 18 per cent sugar. The original beet had less than two per cent.

Seed production is an example of how B.C. Sugar is quietly diversifying in fields related to its main interest.

Rogers diversification is considered desirable where it has some direct relationship with the company's main job of producing quality sugar.

"But there will be no diversification merely for the sake of diversification . . . We like to stay in Western Canada where we know the people and the market, and in areas where we have some expertise."

B.C. Sugar provides the sugar used by Canadians from Vancouver to the Lakehead, with a little less than half originating from company-grown seed.

Imported raw sugar is processed in the Vancouver plant, a $30 million enterprise appropriately located on Rogers Street. The Prairie sugar comes from refineries in Alberta and Manitoba that use Canadian-grown beets.

In recent years, B.C. Sugar has been a highly-successful venture employing 700 full-time workers, including 350 in Vancouver, and with hundreds more working part-time for up to 100 days during the Prairie harvest season.

Conditions were not always so flourishing. "There were early setbacks," says Rogers.

"In the 1890s, father got into great difficulties when two ship-loads of sugar disappeared en route from the East Indies. It was found much later near Java. In order to stay in business he had to buy sugar elsewhere at much higher cost."

Rogers says sugar markets are altering. "The West Indies is going down and down. It has a host of problems. Jamaica for years refused to permit amalgamation of small refineries to raise efficiency. Now they are changing their minds too late."

Cherniavsky says Barbados "has 30 mills when it should have one" and that Cuba remains a declining and uncertain contributor. As a result B.C. Sugar now buys its raw sugar imports in more stable production areas in Australia and Fiji.

Rogers said the growing of sugar beets is an idustry particularly attuned to Alberta, a major cattle raising area, because one of the byproducts, dry beet pulp, is an ideal food for cattle.

Another byproduct, molasses, has ready sale.

Chamber Protests Air Flight Cutbacks

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce Friday voted to send a telegram to the federal ministry of transport in an effort to halt planned cutbacks in Victoria's air service effective Sunday.

Chamber transport committee chairman Jack McKernan said under the new schedule the first plane will leave Victoria at 8:15 a.m. and the last plane will return from the mainland at 10:20 p.m.

This eliminates the popular 7:15 a.m. flight and the essential 11:35 p.m. returning flight from Vancouver, he said.

McKernan said the cutback has a pyramiding effect which will cost Victorians a delay of up to six hours.

For example:

— Under the present schedule a Victorian can fly to San Francisco by 9:55 a.m. but under the cutback starting Sunday the first connecting flight will arrive in San Francisco at 2:28 p.m., more than four hours later.

— The present schedule permits Victorians to get to Edmonton by 9:21 a.m. With the new schedule the earliest they can arrive is 12:30 p.m.

— Victorians heading for Montreal will arrive at 10 p.m. instead of 4 p.m.

— Those bound for Winnipeg will arrive at 3:30 p.m. at the earliest instead of 11:25 a.m.

— The first connecting flight to Toronto will be half an hour later, the first one to Seattle one hour later.

As a result of the cutbacks, many Victorian businessmen will have to fly to Vancouver the night before and stay in a hotel in order to catch an early flight to eastern or southern destinations, McKernan said.

Equally serious was the cutback in return flights to Victoria.

He said up to now Victorians could spend an evening in Vancouver and return home on the 11:35 p.m. flight. But starting Sunday that flight is cancelled and the mainland is cut off from the Island after 10:20 p.m.

The last ferry leaves the mainland at 10 p.m.

McKernan said he was not blaming either Air Canada or Pacific Western Airlines, the two companies serving the route.

He said it was up to the ministry of transport to direct the airlines to restore the early morning and late night service.

McKernan said the MoT had already promised an investigation of the matter but quick action was needed because the cutbacks become effective this weekend.

"It seems our transportation service is being cut back by land, sea and air."

The telegram to the MoT explained the effects of the cutbacks and asked for immediate remedial action.

Starting Sunday Air Canada's flights will be reduced to three from nine per day and Pacific Western Airlines service will increase to seven from three.

This is an over-all cutback from 12 a day to 10, although seating capacity is increased.

McKernan said the chamber would continue its campaign to get an extension of the ferry service to include a sailing from the mainland after 10 p.m.

In another transportation issue, chamber directors meeting at the Strathcona Hotel expressed concern about the proposed closing of three stations on the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway.

Philip Holmes, president of Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island, said his group is "deeply disturbed about the proposed cutbacks."

The chamber directors paid a tribute to past-president Helen Beirnes for her work in organizing the Victorian Days festivities.

She said a program listing all the events of the May 21 to May 27 celebrations would be printed within days.

She said for the first time tourists and persons organizing conventions were scheduling their visits to coincide with the many Victorian Days events.

Among the offbeat events will be an attempt to fly a model airplane across the Strait of Juan de Fuca from Port Angeles to Clover Point.

Winnipeg Women Form Own Real Estate Firm

WINNIPEG (CP) — Real estate isn't an easy field for women, but three who recently formed their own company feel they have a certain edge over male competitors.

"We think we can judge a family's needs better than a man," says Sue Banfield, a partner in the Winnipeg firm of Banfield, Macfarlane Evans Real Estate Ltd.

"We may do the entire deal with a man but we can do so with the confidence that we know what his wife wants in a house."

Mrs. Banfield and Lillian Evans formerly sold real estate for a Winnipeg business while Eleanor Macfarlane, who came to Winnipeg six months ago, had three years of selling real estate in Calgary.

The women banded together partly because they don't agree with the way traditional real estate companies are managed, with salesmen competing against each other.

Mrs. Banfield said it's not uncommon for several, real estate salesmen in one firm to be vying for the same clients, sometimes to the clients' considerable annoyance.

"We feel we could do a better and more productive job working as a team."

Mrs. Banfield has found many misconceptions about the Winnipedg real estate market.

"The average Easterner expects prices here to be three-quarters of what they are down East and they are astounded to find out there is not that much difference."

Mrs. Macfarlane, comparing conditions in Calgary and Winnipeg, said, "The market is less fluid here and not nearly as competitive."

She said in Calgary there is a regular turnover of houses in the $80,000 to $100,000 range while in Winnipeg a house priced over $90,000 is exceptional.

THE CONCRETE CANOE WHICH FLOATS

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto engineers have launched a concrete canoe — and it floats.

The 120-pound craft, made from concrete-coated layers of steel-mesh cloth, is the university's entry in this weekend's International Concrete Canoe Contest at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind.

John Timbush, a professor in the civil engineering department, said the canoe is a byproduct of university medical research into concrete-based casts for broken limbs.

He said the new concrete-and-mesh technique has been patented by the university and may be used for commercial boat-building and construction.

The 'Laziest People' Spring to Life

KINGSTON, Jamaica (FWF) — The Bahamas consist of a great chain of islands, islets, rocks and cays, stretching from Grand Bahama (only 100 miles from the Florida coast) more than 600 miles south east to Inagua, a mere 50 miles from the eastern extremity of Cuba.

The spread is 200 miles at its widest point and there are over 3,000 units, of which only 14 are of any size. These are mostly inhabited. Of a total population of 170,000, 100,000 live on the island of New Providence, on which the capital, Nassau, is situated.

The islands have long been a tourist paradise for Americans, and in more recent years a tax haven for international businesses. No income tax is levied there, although duties on imports are very high.

Until recently, inhabitants have enjoyed a relatively high standard of living despite its high cost, earning themselves the dubious sobriquet of "the laziest people in the western hemisphere."

Until 1968, the islands prospered under a government representing a mainly white oligarchy of the merchant class, but in that year their hold on the legislature was broken by the predominantly Negro Progressive Liberal Party (PLP) led by a London-trained barrister, Lynden O. Pindling.

His main campaign plank was a charge of corruption in connection with gambling casinos at Freeport on Grand Bahama, convenient for Americans coming through Miami. The PLP gained a precarious victory, leading by one seat.

Nevertheless, it was a victory and the following year saw the introduction of a new constitution providing for full internal self-government, with a two-chamber legislature and ministerial system, the British Government remaining responsible only for defence and foreign relations.

However, restrictive policies carried out in the first flush of victory led to a falling-off in the vital tourist trade and a flight of tax-haven capital and institutions, much of it to the nearby Cayman Islands, which remain a British colony and likewise levies no income tax.

Following fresh elections last February, when the PLP consolidated its hold on the government, a delegation comprised of government and opposition representatives held talks in London directed towards the full independence of the Bahamas. Opposition members, claiming to represent 40 per cent of the population, opposed independence, saying the islands were not ready for it; while delegates from the Abaco group of islands (adjacent to Grand Bahama) suggested their secession should independence be granted.

Agreement was reached with the British government for independence to become effective July 10, when the Bahamas government will become responsible for its own defence and foreign affairs. Membership in the British Commonwealth will then be sponsored by Britain, the Queen as head of the Commonwealth will be represented by a governor general and the British government by a high commissioner.

Pindling will become prime minister instead of premier and the Bahamas will seek admission to the United Nations and the organization of American States.

Shortly after the London talks, Pindling made governmental changes designed to restore confidence abroad and bring back tax-haven business, and to restore the tourist trade to its former peak. Pindling has since toured the U.S., where he discussed trade, aid and other matters of common interest with state department officials.

He spoke of the Bahamas as a possible future oil transhipment point for the U.S. and been urged their suitability as the site of a new headquarters — on neutral ground — for the U.N.

Questions of finance and defence are to be discussed with the British government prior to independence, and whilst Britain no doubt will be willing to assist the Bahamas to stand on their own feet, the matter of defence is important because of proximity to Cuba and Haiti, from which refugees have plagued the island.

The Bahamas will take over all treaty rights from Britain at independence and have expressed the intention of renegotiating agreements for bases and the like.

Britain has at present naval and military installations there, while the U.S. maintains naval and coastguard stations and a NASA missile-tracking station.

However, U.S. interest appears to be waning and Britain may possibly hand over some installations, as it has done to other independent Caribbean countries, and assist in training the local police and military.

Profit Motive Comes To Poland's Plants

By TREVOR WOOD

WARSAW (Reuter) — Poland has launched a reform of its factory management, giving managers more freedom from control by central planners and introducing profit incentive for the first time.

The reform, which began in January, will be expanded to factories representing one-fifth of Poland's industrial production.

An earlier reform plan, introduced by the regime of Wladyslaw Gomulka, was a root cause of the 1970 riots in the Baltic ports which led to Gomulka's replacement by Edward Gierek as Communist party secretary.

Drawing lessons from that experiment, the new régime has made changes aimed at improving efficiency and producing better consumer goods.

Until now, factories have been given a certain amount of money and material to produce a given amount of goods. Any deviation from the agreed plan needed authority from the central planning commission.

LED TO ABUSE

This led to abuse, delays and the sacrifice of quality to fill quotas.

For the first time, wages and bonuses for management will depend not on production alone but on sales.

Polish officials are reluctant to use the word "profit" in this respect, preferring to use the phrase "pure production figure." This is described as the amount the factory has created without external income and is derived by deducting from the sales figure the cost of materials and of investment credits.

The larger part of the pure production figure goes to pay wages. But if pure production increases, for example, through a more efficient use of materials, the wages fund rises in proportion.

Of the money remaining after paying wages, a percentage goes to the state in tax. The remainder is divided again, the larger part going to a fund to develop the enterprise—presumably to make more profit—and the smaller to paying bonuses to the management.

These bonuses cannot exceed the equivalent of four months salary for a director.

STATE ROLE LIMITED

The state continues to demand that production fall within the over-all economic plan but, once the article and its price have been approved by the state, there is no further interference in the actual production.

However, management can no longer fall back on virtually automatic credits from the state if it runs into difficulty. Such credits are granted only if the management can show good prospects of increasing production and then only at a high interest rate—this year 12 per cent.

For example, if the pure production figure falls instead of rises, wages will not be allowed to fall in unison and the management will have to seek credits.

The repayment of these credits will eventually affect the payment of bonuses to the management, so directors are encouraged to find a more efficient solution to safeguard their bonuses.

The Poles say the main appeal of their system is that prices remain fixed so that factories cannot resort to increasing prices as an easy way to make profit. They must produce goods which are acceptable to the trade in order to increase sales.

Factories have a choice of using their profits either to increase employment or to increase wages. It was the blocking of these two factors which doomed the earlier plan.

Under the old five-year plan, the growth of wages was limited and factories would have paid possibly large profits to the state while wages increased by only 10 per cent. Employment was also blocked—in a situation where there were increasing numbers coming into the labor market.

The fear of unemployment and the fixing of wages coinciding with price increases produced a flare-up which the present regime is anxious to avoid.

He Can Measure Pot in Blood

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston scientist says his team's development of a test to measure minute amounts of marijuana in the blood is a big breakthrough in marijuana research.

Dr. David Fenimore's findings were made in rabbits, but the researcher says he hopes human blood studies can start within six months.

"What we've done could be likened to the blood alcohol test," he said. "Our test should open the door for finding answers to many questions about the effects of marijuana on humans."

Fenimore said his technique paves the way for scientists to measure the exact amount of marijuana in human blood at any given time and correlate that data with heart rates, behavioral patterns and other vital information.

Fenimore, head of the instrumental analysis section at the Texas Research Institute of Mental Sciences here, first discussed his findings at the Eighth International Symposium on Advances in Chromatography held recently in Toronto.

He said volunteer college students likely will be used for the human studies.

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

LONG TRAIL TO THE SUMMIT

The next stage in the preliminary rounds leading to the world championship contest will be the interzonals in Leningrad (June 2-29) and Brasilia (July 20-August 20). There will be a total of 36 players, 12 of whom, incidentally, are Russian. Robert Byrne of the U.S. will be playing in Leningrad; his colleague, Sammy Reshevsky, in Brasilia.

From each of these two interzonals, the three top players will be chosen to move up to the next rung. These six, plus Boris Spassky and Tigran Petrosian will play in the 1974 candidates' matches and the winner of these will be the challenger for the world title, against Bobby Fischer, in 1975.

OSCAR THE GREAT

Among those few people I envy in the world are the parents of Oscar Maass, a seven-year-old prodigy in Juarez, Mexico. And it's not simply because of his phenomenal chess playing either. It is because he is already a gentleman, friendly and courteous, in complete self control, an extremely handsome young man who, win or lose, plays with grace.

Oscar attracts great throngs of spectators wherever he goes—and wherever he goes he continues to beat experienced opponents who simply can't believe so much chess genius can reside in this innocent little figure.

In the recent past, little Oscar has played in open tournaments in San Antonio, where he won one game out of five, in Houston, where he scored 1½ out of five, and most recently in El Paso, where he scored an incredible three points out of six!

He plays fast, perhaps a bit too fast, but he has definite ideas, does not know what fear is, and even when he goes wrong, he exhibits a surprising and disconcerting tenacity. See the following game against a rated U.S. player, played February 19, 1973, in the El Paso Open.

N.S. Chief Hits Gregory's Scheme

The Nova Scotia police association has objected to federal support of a program which has law students working with police during the summer, saying the money would be better spent training more policemen.

But the man who started the program in Victoria, police chief John Gregory, said today it may be the association doesn't fully understand the scheme.

Bill Meisner, association president, said in Amherst, N.S. Thursday that law students working with police forces in the province would jeopardize the chances of policemen being trained at Holland College in Charlottetown, who have a greater right to such summer positions.

If the federal government has a vast amount of money for such a program, he said then it should use it to train more policemen.

Justice Minister Otto Lang last month named Gregory to oganize a national program which will see law students gain an insight into police work by working with officers through the summer.

The program is in its fifth year in Victoria. Objective nationally is to hire about 100 law students for four months at a cost of about $260,000.

"It's unfortunate the police association of Nova Scotia is objecting to this plan, which has proven its worth in both Saanich and Victoria," said Gregory.

"I feel they may not have all the information on the Victoria experiment."

Gregory said he had hoped to visit each province, speaking to police chiefs, associations and commissions about the plan and asking their help but approval of the federal grant came too late to permit this. Such organizations are being contacted by letter.

Bench-Rider Files Suit For Damages

HARRISON, Mich. (AP) — An 18-year-old high school senior wants $100,000 for emotional damages and the harm done to his reputation by being benched before the state's play-off – basketball tournament for allegedly being a bad influence.

The suit, filed in Clare County Circuit Court in behalf of Dan Iacco, is against the Clare School District and Clare High School basketball Coach Jon Bohannon.

Iacco claims all the coach told him was, "I would have to show my loyalty before I could play again.

"It was very embarrassing for me, sitting on the bench during the playoff games. Being the team captain, I was supposed to be a leader."

Students Get Taste Of Paris

The Louvre, the Eiffel Tower, the flea market, the Left Bank — they sampled them all during their two-week stay as guests of the French education ministry.

"It's a most wonderful program," said Barbara Lang, French teacher from Esquimalt Senior Secondary School who went with the students and returned with them Thursday.

Everything was organized for the group, from morning classes in French to afternoon guided tours in their own bus, she said.

The students — from Greater Victoria and other Vancouver guided tours in their own bus, Island areas — were part of a larger group of 173 B.C. students who made the trip.

They stayed in the dormitories of a technical school near Versailles, and each day bused into Paris or to other places, such as to the famed cathedral at Chartres and to Malmaison, once home of the Empress Josephine.

"They really came in contact with the life over there," said Lang.

Students talked to ordinary French people in the streets, learned to use the Paris metro, and got a taste of French cuisine.

The course was organized by the Canadian Youth Hostels Association, Pacific region.

The other teacher accompanying the Vancouver Island group was David Massey of Belmont Senior Secondary School.

Quebec Set to Parole Unionists

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa says Quebec's three jailed union leaders will be eligible for parole in a few days and could be released if they apply for parole.

The premier said in an interview that Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) and Yvon Charbonneau, head of the Quebec Teachers Corp. (QTC), will have served one-quarter of their one-year sentences in the next few days and will be eligible for parole.

The premier's statement, in an interview marking his third anniversary in power, comes just a few days before protest marches in Montreal and Quebec City May 1 organized by the three labor federations to protest the continued imprisonment of their leaders.

Laberge, Pepin and Charbonneau are serving one-year sentences for contempt of court in counselling certain hospital workers to ignore back-to-work injunctions during a public service strike in April, 1972.

"The government will not fail to be realistic," Mr. Bourassa said, adding that the justice department is studying the case.

In Montreal, CNTU spokesman Norbert Rodrigue said there had been no negotiations with the justice department concerning Pepin.

He said the CNTU had not decided whether Pepin would ask for an appeal and called the premier's statement a "political manoeuvre" in an attempt to minimize the impact of the May 1 protests.

The big three served about two weeks of their terms last year but were released while they appealed.

They returned to jail early in February after the Quebec Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada rejected appeals.

The 1972 jailing of the three men resulted in a wave of labor unrest that rocked the province for nearly two weeks last May.

Three international labor leaders met with the premier earlier this month to demand amnesty for the three men.

Mr. Bourassa said after that meeting that the government would not be "blackmailed" into releasing the leaders and said the only "solution" to the problem would be under the terms of the law applicable to everyone—in other words parole.

The international labor groups hinted repeatedly that they might escalate their protests from symbolic statements to action—possibly a boycott of Quebec — or Canadian-made goods—but the threats have not materialized.

In other developments Friday, the Parti Quebecois announced its participation in the protest marches to be held May 1—the traditional labor day holiday in many countries.

The CNTU and the QTC are organizing the Quebec City march while all three federations are planning the march in Montreal.

CADETS RETURN

More than 200 sea cadets, some from Victoria, are returning to their homes this weekend after exploring Desolation Sound which was surveyed in 1872 by the ships HMS Discovery and HMS Chatham commanded by famous navigator Capt. George Vancouver.

Desolation Sound is about 19 miles from Campbell River and was set aside as a provincial park two weeks ago.

The cadets were on their annual Easter cruise which started Good Friday. They came from all parts of the province and from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario.

Lt. Col. Stewart Alsgard of Powell River was in charge.

The purpose of the cruise was to train cadets in seamanship skills and camping. Another project was to identify historical sites mentioned in officers' journals. Cadets in Capt. Vancouver's log and also collected relics and built cairns.

About 100 cadets camped on the shores of Squirrel Cove and operated eight 32-foot sailing cutters.

Another 100 made up a power squadron. They manned four 80-foot personnel craft which have been adapted for cadet work.

Unions-Only Protest

CASTLEGAR (CP) — Representatives of more than 380 small contractors met Friday night to mobilize opposition to the provincial government's Bill 153 that says most companies bidding on government contracts must be union shops.

Mike Kereiff, who runs a one-man refrigeration, air conditioning and heating company here, said in an interview the meeting decided to contact all groups throughout B.C. and make a formal protest to Victoria.

"All of us are concerned about the ramification of Bill 153, and how it eventually will affect our livelihoods," he said. "This bill is discriminatory and not too much consideration or thought was given to it.

"It was lobbied for by large contractors, most of them unionized, and the labor unions, without regard to the small contractors," he said.

'The Way War Was . . . A Long Time Ago'

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

A bunch of the boys were standing around the Empress Hotel lobby after imbibing some good rye with Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen.

"It was a wonderful reception compared with what we got three years ago in Buckingham Palace," said Victor Thompson, 76, of Grimsby, Ontario.

By Golly, we never even got a sandwich."

"Not a thing," Ralph MacBean, 79, of St. Catherines, Ontario agreed.

Fifty-five years ago the boys were paid 10 shillings and six pence per month to shoot down German airplanes with .303 Vickers machine guns mounted on frail gun platforms known as SE-5s, DH-5s and Short seaplanes.

Those years are engraved in their minds. So every year they try to get together for a reunion somewhere in Canada. This year it was three days of nostalgia and fellowship which ended Thursday night in Victoria.

Blue blazers and sharply pressed grey flannels meld in with the Empress' Jacobean interior very nicely.

And the American tourists slouching by in paisley shirts and chinos gave the ex-flyers curious looks.

"Do we bring our own paint?" asked one to a chorus of laughter.

It was like Old Boys Day at a private school.

That evening's dinner rules were precisely laid out in the program.

"As usual there will be separate dinners for the ladies and men. These will be informal."

Why the apartheid?

"Stories," MacBean said with a smile.

"Experiences, and the way they are told," added Thompson.

"We were up on the dawn patrol . . . I tipped the machine up. I looked down and there was damn little triplane just pulling up. In about three seconds he had me shot up the crack. I pulled off my throttle and he kind of shot ahead. I kicked around and went down on him and I kept shooting, getting closer, and shooting . . ."

A few days later the "kill" was confirmed by ground forces.

"It was a mixed up thing all the time; from one day to the other you never knew what was going to come up," Thompson said.

Or what was going to come down, it might be said.

"One time when I was getting badly shot up I looked up and wondered what in the hell have I ever done to you? . . . In a minute or two you were probably around doing the same thing to him," said MacBean.

But there was levity too.

"Hell, we went about half way through this distillery . . . the Australians were expecting a drink, as I probably was . . ."

None was forthcoming. So an Australian pilot piped up in his most sardonic voice: "We get some of your whisky out in Australia. First time you're out there, you drop in and we'll give you a drink."

"I thought we were going to be kicked out," Macpherson chortled, slapping his knee.

Victor Thompson preferred pubs to distilleries.

"To blow off steam we would get into a Crossley tender and go off into the nearest town and have a bit of a binge."

"We got bombed quite often at night," he added, meaning it in the literal sense.

And sometimes near tragedy was tempered by bravado.

Twenty miles out of Naden, England, Macpherson's 260 horsepower 12-cyclinder Sunbeam engine sputtered to a stop.

"On the second patrol of the bloody day . . . it just conked out," he said.

"I had an English observer. He was a member of the Picadilly Club. He stands up in the rear cockpit and says I hope you make a good landing.

"I said, Jesus Christ, no more than I do!"

Macpherson brought the Short seaplane down in the best tradition of the Royal Naval Air Service. A Royal Navy torpedo boat was alongside in seven minutes.

"The lieutenant came out on the stern and said, gentlemen, would you come aboard and have a drink?"

"Not until this goddam thing sinks," Macpherson replied.

That's the way war was, sometimes, a long time ago.

CAYER HAS LEFT-OUT FEELING

QUEBEC (CP) — Marc Cayer, released in February after five years as a prisoner in North Vietnam, claims that Ottawa has forgotten him.

"They did much to obtain my freedom, but since then it's zero," he said Friday.

"At least they could have offered me some kind of rehabilitation program like that offered by the United States government of its ex-prisoners."

Cayer also said he can't understand why the federal government hasn't offered him some kind of employment.

He said that he has received certain offers from the Quebec government, but that he hasn't decided about any of them.

BLAME JAPANESE . . . !

Violent changes in the international lumber market, especially in Japan, are to blame for the sharp increase in lumber prices in recent months.

"Japanese buyers are grabbing everything in sight," says one Victoria supplier.

The Japanese grab has also hit other supply markets and again reverberated in Canada. West Coast importers recently found their contract orders for 'Philippine mahogany" were simply cancelled, and this popularly priced semi-finishing lumber is probably on its way up and out of range.

The Japanese are also adopting B.C. lumber sizes in their buildings. Instead of buying mostly the rough-cut "Jap squares," they are cutting shipping costs by importing more dressed or finished lumber, leaving the shavings on the floors of B.C. mills.

The over-all effect is that "they're willing to pay any damn thing," he says, which leaves a piddling market like Victoria's staggering in the wind.

The consumer of lumber materials here probably sees prices going up only once a month but this is merely a sop to the requirements of cataloguing. Meanwhile, the price to export markets goes up daily.

"The funny part about it," says the supplier, is that the "screaming and crying" has died down. "Everybody's resigned to the whole thing."

Suppliers, of course, are passing on the price differences, but beyond this, there is evidence of an unprecedented boom in housing in Victoria.

"I have not ever seen a bigger demand for building materials," the supplier says.

Victoria Times

SECOND SECTION

why are housing costs soaring almost out of sight? reporter Clement Chapple finds even builders uncertain of the reasons

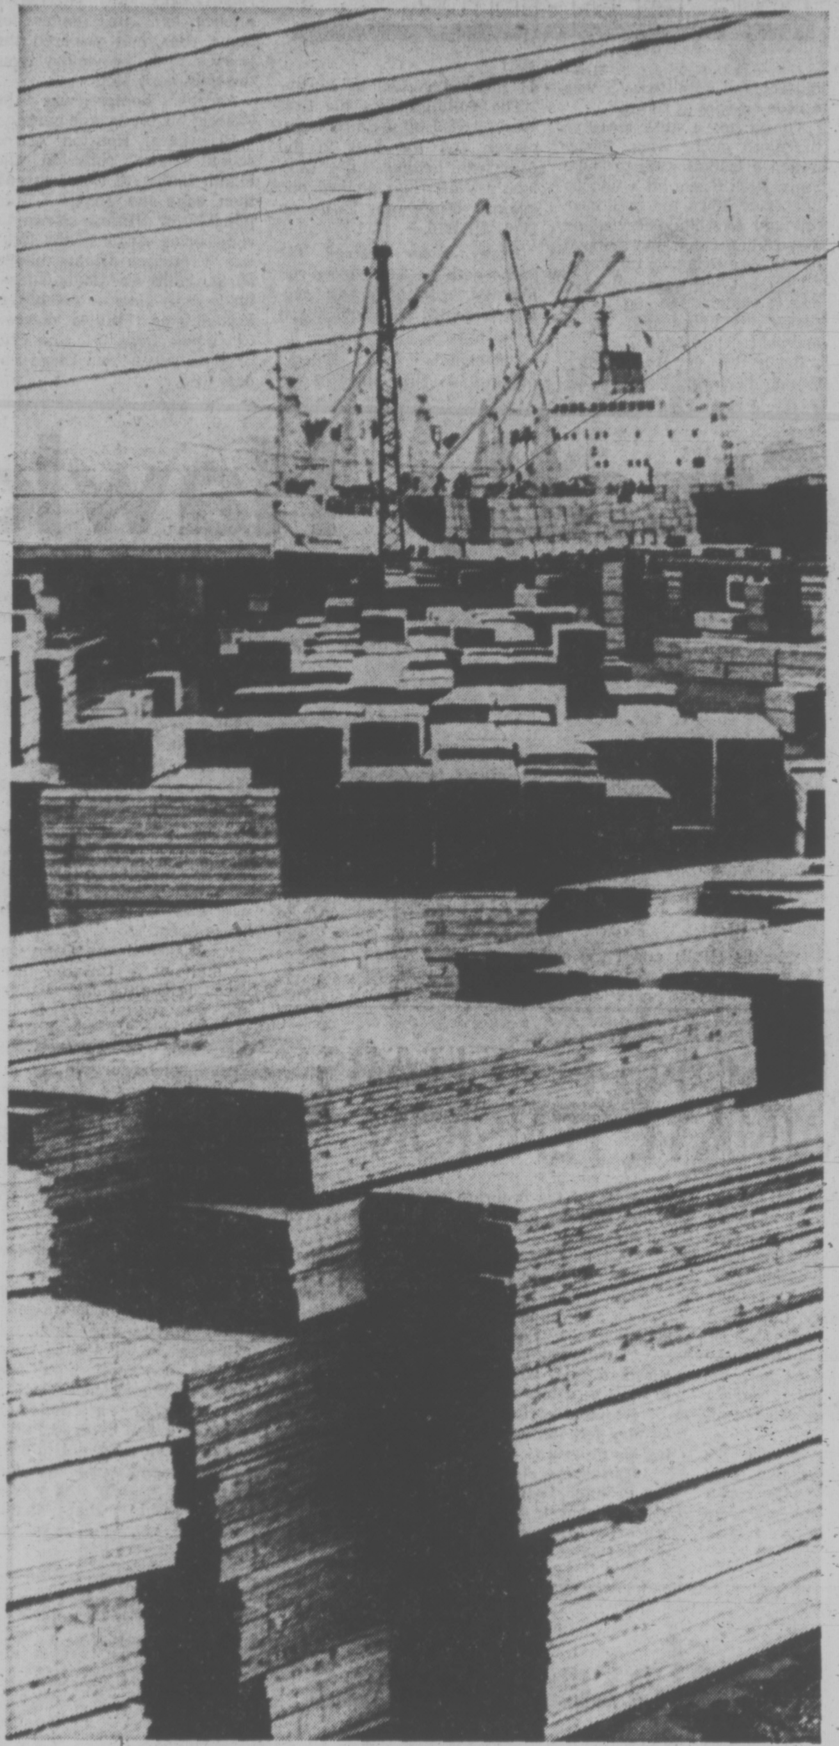
SOME LOSE, SOME GAIN



ONE OF THE REASONS for the high cost of housing is the price of lumber. Victoria suppliers blame the export market for the sharp increase in cost. This stack of lumber at Ogden Point awaits transfer to ocean-going freighters for shipment to Japan.

"We're on a steamroller right now. When is the bubble going to burst? The end of this year? The end of next?"

The image of steamrollers chasing bubbles is not exactly reassuring, but that's the way the housing business works, says Chris Pike, president of Pine Home Builders Ltd.

Housing prices in Victoria, as in most of Canada, have risen so rapidly in the last few months that even the experts are uncertain of the causes.

Shortage of land, most people in the business agree, is a major factor in the Victoria area.

But the shortage is necessarily tied to a sudden increase in demand for housing, which in turn may be caused by new confidence in the economy, or by surplus mortgage money in the lending institutions and force-fed spending psychology such as the Royal Bank's "free licence plate" advertising.

Big Headache

As in the stock market, many people will gain because of the current boom, but others will lose or at least find it a big headache.

It can cause a professional appraiser like P. G. Jackson considerable trouble.

If on his advice, says Jackson, a homeowner unloads his house for $25,000 while prices are running away, he may not be able to buy even an equal house with his $25,000. This could be the most dangerous aspect of the boom to the ordinary home purchaser.

Those in the industry are reluctant to place blame for today's housing costs on any one segment, but governments are not popular for their part in the system.

The biggest complaint levelled at governments is that they have failed to provide adequate planning to handle the urban boom of the postwar years. Despite loud political concern, land speculation and destruction of the natural environment are still unchecked.

Gripes

A common gripe voiced by home buyers is that building materials are too costly.

If a potential buyer has watched price increases he will see that since November, lumber materials in Victoria suppply outlets have risen by an average of 25 per cent since last November . . . a phenomenal annual rate of 100 per cent caused mostly by export demands.

But who can afford to create a boom in housing when prices are soaring?

The answer, apparently, is almost anyone.

The economy is buoyant. Family heads look forward to earning more, and realtors point out that more wives are taking jobs and further increasing family incomes.

But more important, lending money is spilling from the coffers of institutional lenders. Letters from these institutions are flowing into the offices of mortgage brokers, welcoming applications for loans at the prime (lowest) interest rate.

At the ordinary consumer borrowing level, money is also available in heaps, insured by the encouraging policies of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the government body that allows payments over a span of 40 years in some cases.

Need $1,500

It's impossible to know how much money is available for home-buying loans but until the Bank of Canada's prime rate rose slightly a few weeks ago, mortgages were going for a relatively low (for inflation periods) 9 per cent. The prime rate increase has done nothing to stop actual lending, however, says CMHC local manager Chris Dowling, which now goes out closer to 9.25 per cent.

Much of the mortgage money is payable over 25 years, and with CMHC insured mortgages, the maximum mortgage value is $30,000.

Because mortgaging will cover 95 per cent of the appraised value of a new house, only $1,500 is needed as a down payment on a $30,000 home. payments would then be about $240 a month. Only the squeamish would note that when the whole thing is paid off in 25 years, the cost has been well over $70,000.

In summary, money is easy to find, and people are not hesitating to look for it.

Land Shortage

The possibility exists that a shortage of housing, relative to the demand is the cause of the easy money. Dowling says that only 50 new houses are vacant in Victoria at present, a relatively low number.

What is more, despite the real demand for more housing, new housing "starts" are about even with last year's figure.

It all points to a shortage of land on which to put up new housing. Chris Pike, who builds up to 20 new units a year believes this.

"I used to buy lots for $2,000," Pike recalls.

Today, a developer will say "I want $12,000" for a similar lot. "Not only do I want $12,000 but I want $12,000 in cash." It's not unusual for land to account for 30 per cent of the cost of a house.

With the cost of land rising, the builder is forced into a pattern of further pushing up the price. Included in his gross profit from a house sale will be enough money to buy the next lot he builds on, and that new lot he expects will exceed the cost of the first lot.

When a builder says shortage of land, what he means is shortage of land approved for building. Political pressure in the last several years has led to powerful deterrents to the free-wheeling development known in the past. Sewer requirements were the first deterrent, followed by rural and farmland subdivision freezes.

More recently, zoning requirements have been tightened and developers and builders must provide more servicing to enable them to build and sell houses.

These policies are "drying up land," says Pike.

Perhaps exaggerating to make his point, he says all the governments concerned should mark out parks on the Saanich Peninsula and then simply let the developers and builders go their own way.

Speculators

But there's nothing to prove such a policy might not precipitate an orgy of land swapping more harmful than the present apparent shortage.

Appraiser Jackson points to a 7.64-acre plot of vacant land on Old West Saanich Road which sold for $15,000 in March, 1972. It sold 10 weeks later for $20,000, demonstrating that speculative trading is going on despite restrictions on development.

One of the recurring statements *made by people con*nected with the housing business goes something like this:

"You'll get a different story from Jones the builder than you got from me." And sure enough, Jones comes up with a different reason for land prices or lumber prices, than the last fellow.

For the consumer who really wants to understand how he will be investing one quarter of his earnings, analysis is not easy. He will have to consult an independent appraiser, a realtor, a builder, a building materials supplier, probably two mortgage lenders and a banker, perhaps a land surveyor and certainly a lawyer.

He may also be wise to know what municipal and even provincial officials have to say about the place he is going to set up house.

Confusion

Having done all this, he will be confused even more to read news stories from Ottawa in which cabinet ministers say the home mortgaging system is a tool used by governments to manipulate the economy.

In the end he will realize that he is on the tag end of a system that is influenced from many quarters but is controlled by no one, least of all by the man who wants to live in a house.

The clearest thing about the system today is that, like Pike says, the housing market is a steamroller.

What is not so clear is the difference between being on top of the steamroller, or under it.

NEW HOMES are being bought as fast as they can be built . . . despite prices that seem to go up and up with no end in sight. This group of homes are being built off Glanford in Saanich.

Why Rush Children Through Childhood?

The beachcombers club appeared on the tide flats while I was checking the sea's driftwood inventory for two-by-fours. First came the boys, bird-dogging ahead, then the girls chattering along in a cluster, and finally an elementary school teacher who does much more than deliver knowledge in prescribed rations. Among her gifts is the ability to infect children with her own sense of wonder and delight in the natural world.

A while ago the beachcombers club permitted my wife and me to tag along on a field trip to a bay up the line. The club gathered sunset-colored telon shells that had once encased bivalves no larger than a finger nail. Members also collected sea-smoothed pebbles — black ones preferred — for a classroom enterprise. They left a moon snail undisturbed to fabricate its sand collar, carefully replaced rocks under which shore crabs congregated, and asked questions a dozen to the minute.

I don't know what their club project was on this April day, but along with discovering the new and the strange in the happiest possible way, they would be asking questions and getting informed answers.

Lucky kids, I thought, as the wide, boulder-studded flat absorbed the last of them. And luckier still because their outings aren't cramped into joylessness by the host of niggling restrictions and regulations that adults of a certain stamp find necessary when dealing with children.

They are, in fact, permitted to be children, and what they learn is the least of what they acquire from such afternoons as this. They may forget the name of the seaweed that rustles and pops under their damp running shoes, but they are likely to remember in later years that a teacher whose name they can't recall opened a door on peculiar treasure.

Some teachers and parents have this happy knack. A manual training teacher whose face and lanky frame I remember though his name escapes me was another of these openers of doors.

He was a silent man, speaking only when necessity demanded. But he imparted a feeling for sound wood and well-cared-for tools, and his nod of approval for a decently-fitted joint could make a boy's day. The word "discipline" didn't figure in his teaching, yet in a tough school his classes went unplagued by disciplinary problems. I could never emulate his precise skills, and none of my present adventures in make-and-mend would rate his nod. But I am thankful to him for the pleasure I find in working with wood.

It is hard to pin down the quality that such men and women possess. We say they have a way with children, but that's no more than a statement of obvious fact. Perhaps part of the secret is that they retain a much clearer picture of what it is to be a child than most of us carry into our adult years.

It may also be that failure to retain even a dim impression of childhood's world is responsible for the woeful thing that happens to so many children. I know parents who hurry their sons and daughters through those wonderyears as if the very law of the land demanded that the 10-year-old achieve instant maturity.

They crowd their children into activities for which life has yet to prepare them.

They burden small boys with gifts of a complexity far beyond their years, and shove hapless little girls into social situations for which they are lamentably unready, and can't understand what's gone wrong when their well-intended blunderings produce junior neurotics.

The underpriviliged child deserves sympathy. But so does the child who is being robbed of his childhood. I could wish such young ones a spot in the beachcombers club, where nobody is required to be a junior biologist or ecologist . . . where a little useful knowledge is painlessly acquired, and everyone has a whale of a time.

The drift tangles yielded me enough two-by-four to finish off a cold frame.

The beachcombers club was still deployed among the rocks. I tramped out toward the water's edge where a flock of migrant black brant was making subdued conversation. The little geese rose in their hundreds with a clamor of wings, and as I'd hoped they would, flew low along the beach to land near the children.

Call them a gift to some young ones who aren't being robbed of their childhood.

Foreign Teachers 'Should Be Taxed'

Education ministers today urged the federal government to end the two-year tax holiday for American and British teachers coming to work in Canada.

"The policy should be discontinued," said Saul Miller, Manitoba's minister of colleges and university affairs.

"There may have been justification for it years ago," he said, when there was a teacher shortage, but that situation no longer exists.

Miller is president of the Council of Ministers of Education, which concluded two days of closed meeting in the Empress Hotel today.

This morning the ministers heard a proposal by Ottawa for a federally-funded Volunteer Linguistic Corps to help with oral French in the schools.

"As far as B.C. is concerned, we're interested," said Education Minister Eileen Dailly.

The project, outlined by federal commissioner of official languages Keith Spicer, is to have 200 student teachers majoring in English or French to spend their final year improving their second language in another province.

While they do this, they will work in public schools helping regular language teachers with language instruction.

The program, which Ottawa would like to start this September, will be administered by the provinces.

Kansas City Rookie Fashions No-Hitter

By The Associated Press

Detroit Tigers couldn't get a hit off Kansas City rookie Steve Busby in spring training and continued that frustrating inefficiency in the regular American League baseball season Friday night.

"I just threw as hard as I could for as long as I could," said the 23-year-old right-hander after pitching a 3-0 no-hitter over the Tigers, the first no-hitter in the American League since 1970.

The performance, called the "greatest thrill of my life" by the 6-foot-2, 205-pounder, was fashioned on a heavy diet of fastballs. It wasn't the same kind of game that Busby pitched in the exhibition season, when he combined on a no-hitter with Doug Bird against Detroit.

"Down there at Fort Myers, Fla., I tried to hit spots," said the blond Busby. "Tonight I threw 75 per cent fastballs and nearly all the rest sliders."

In other American League games, Texas Rangers defeated Milwaukee Brewers 4-2, Cleveland Indians downed California Angels 6-2 and Oakland Athletics nipped Baltimore Orioles 4-3 in 12 innings. Two games were rained out—Minnesota at New York and Chicago at Boston.

Busby's no-hitter was far from perfect. He walked six batters and admitted: "I was a little bit wild at times."

Things got a little tense in the ninth inning when Busby issued a leadoff walk to Duke Sims. Rich Reese hit a vicious line drive down the first base line and John Mayberry made a sparkling catch and stepped on the base to double up Sims.

"My hat fell over my eyes and I didn't see it," said Busby. "I heard him hit it and said: 'Uh, Oh!.'"

Busby then got Bill Freehan to pop to short. Fred Patek, who caught the ball, raced to the mound and lifted the no-hit pitcher off the turf in jubilation.

"I caught that last ball, that's the only one that counts," said Patek, who seemed just as excited as Busby.

The no-hitter was the first ever pitched by a Kansas City player and the first in the American League since Oakland's Vida Blue pitched one against Minnesota Twins on Sept. 21, 1970.

Busby, who entered the game with an 8.04 earned-run average, got home-run support from Ed Kirkpatrick and Amos Otis.

Cleveland's Milt Wilcox, making his first start of the season, flirted with a no-hitter for seven innings and wound up with a three-hit victory over California.

In the National League, Atlanta's Hank Aaron and Darrell Evans hit successive pitches by Tom Seaver for home runs that powered the Braves to a 2-0 victory over the New York Mets.

Aaron's homer was the 678th of his big league career.

Elsewhere, Houston Astros scored three runs in the eighth inning to tie Montreal, then edge the Expos 6-5 on pinch-hitter Jimmy Stewart's run-scoring single in the 10th; San Francisco Giants blanked St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 behind Jim Barr's two-hitter, Philadelphia Phillies downed Cincinnati Reds 3-1, and Chicago Cubs beat San Diego Padres 10-2.

The 1973 Canada Games Are Primarily for Youth

bill walker

What Victoria didn't get, is most certainly a definite plus for the New Westminster-Burnaby area. And that friends, is a gentle introduction to the 1973 Canada Summer Games which will be held on the mainland from Aug. 3 to 12.

Between those dates there will be nine days of competition between 2,500 athletes from within Canada with the accent heavily on youth, as it should be. This is the second of the quadrennial Summer Games, the first being held at Dartmouth Halifax in 1969. And as Victoria's bid for this very same bid was rejected, it is at least proper that they kept the affair in the province. Besides, it appears to be in good hands.

The most pleasing aspect is that the Summer Games originally were designed to provide competition for youngsters at the development level and to help provide sports facilities where otherwise there may not be the means of providing any. And fortunately this policy is continuing. In the words of Bill Ramsell, president of the 1973 Summer Games Society, "the main thing is to stimulate an interest in amateur sport throughout the nation; and we are pleased to be a part of it."

The cost: Approximately $4.26 million. But hark, before you complain, this looks like money well spent. Nearly all of the 16 sports events which will be represented are at the junior or a comparative age level; and where else but to spend money on athletics?

A Legacy of $2.5 Million

Besides, there will be that all-important legacy of improved or new permanent facilities left in the area that will have cost $2.5 million.

Two of these are the $1.2 million Olympic-size pool, which has been described as "second-to-none in Canada," and the Burnaby Lake Sports Complex.

This is where a rowing course of international standards has been designed. As well, it will be the site of rowing, canoeing, tennis and field hockey for the games. The cost: another $1 million.

Swangard Stadium also has been improved to the tune of $150,000 for new lights, an eight-lane, 400-metre artificial running track and a resurfaced playing field that compares with the best European facilities for track and field.

Afterwards, the entire community will benefit.

Denny Veitch, executive director of the games, put it plainly enough when he said: "We don't really want the publicity for the games, but rather for the young competitors — this is for them."

"This is bigger, too, than the 1954 Empire Games," he suggested. "Then there were only 900 competitors — we will have nearly 3,000. The sum of $40,000 was spent on the Vedder Canal for rowing events in 1954. It has never been used since. already we have 10 events scheduled for there (Burnaby Lake) in the future."

Another major event for future thought is the world youth rowing championship. This is an event which is also being considered as a possibility for Shawnigan Lake.

Speaking of Lotteries

This, actually, was the first stop on a cross-Canada tour of the Summer Games people, and for the B.C. government, Gordie Pynn explained that the final selection to various teams would be made in co-operation with the provincial associations involved and the B.C. Sports Federation.

If the joint effort by New Westminster and Burnaby appears rather unique, the co-operation between the mayors, Bob Pritty of Burnaby and Muni Evers of New Westminster has been described as exemplary.

The unfortunate part, however, is that Pritty soon won't be a part of the Games. He has accepted the position of Assistant Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs here in Victoria and will take up his new post in June.

"Actually, I guess you could say we came out of the recent election in pretty good shape," he quipped in regard to provincial government support for the Games. "We ended up with three cabinet ministers and a speaker — Dennis Cocke, New Westminster; Eileen Dailly, Burnaby North; Jim Lorimer, Burnaby Willingdon, and Gordon Dowding, Burnaby-Edmonds.

"Not that we didn't have excellent co-operation from the previous government," he added. "It was fine."

And perhaps an oddity for posterity. Because when the Socreds were in power, permission to hold a lottery in connection with the Summer Games had been withheld by then attorney-general Les Peterson. However, with the election of the NDP, the Canada Games Lottery was set up, and approved, with a total prize list of $100,000.

That's a tidy sum; and if Summer Games officials are prohibited from winning any of the lottery prizes — "it wouldn't look right," explained Ramsell — this rule doesn't include ex-cabinet ministers.

Not even Mr. Peterson.

On Friday, he bought a ticket.

COWENS SPARKS CELTIC SURGE

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Cowens scored 26 points and sparked Boston on a 12-0 spree in the fourth quarter as the Celtics evened their National Basketball Association playoff series against New York at three games each by defeating the Knicks, 110-100, Friday night.

The teams will meet in the seventh game of the Eastern Conference finals in Boston Sunday afternoon.

With the Knicks ahead 96-94 midway through the fourth quarter, Cowens sank a basket to tie the score and Don Nelson hit two free throws to put Boston ahead for good.

Cowens hit an 18-foot jumper and a hook shot, then John Havlicek added two free throws and a basket and Boston held a 10 point lead.

DOUG JARRETT
. . . overcomes nerves

Steady Hawk

CHICAGO (CP) — "Nerves have to be the biggest problem on the ice," Doug Jarrett, Chicago's unheralded defenceman, said Friday as the Black Hawks prepared for Sunday's start of the Stanley Cup final at Montreal.

The veteran blueliner is one of Chicago's forgotten heroes, a competent performer whose effectiveness is often overlooked in the shadow of smoothies Bill White and Pat Stapleton, gregarious Keith Magnuson and rookie Phil Russell.

"Dennis (Hull) and I kid a lot on the ice, especiallly in the playoffs when you're tighter than a drum," said Jarrett.

The 29-year-old Jarrett got away to his best-ever start in a Chicago uniform and seemed headed for the stardom that has eluded him in nine National Hockey League seasons—all with the Hawks—when he was sidelined in mid-January with a broken leg.

"Doug was really flying, probably our best defenceman game in, game out, until he broke his leg," coach Billy Reay said. "Don't think it doesn't mean a lot to this club having him around for the playoffs."

The 6-foot-1, 205-pound defender has had his share of adversity to overcome this year.

His family was unable to join him in Chicago early in the season because a young son required surgery.

"They were coming down Jan. 15. On Jan. 13, I broke my leg (against Philadelphia Flyers). I had to phone my wife and tell her to keep the house open."

As it turned out, Doug was in and out of Chicago three times having the cast changed and was ready to rejoin the team during its last visit of the season to Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens early in March.

"But the club was doing pretty good at the time so Billy suggested I take another week off."

Jarrett reurned home and skated with the Niagara Falls junior club before rejoining his team-mates in mid-March, two weeks before the season ended.

He was the fifth defenceman in Reay's game plans until Magnuson's jaw was shattered in the second game of the semifinal with New York Rangers when the Chicago defender attempted to smother a shot by Brad Park.

YOGA LESSONS FOR HABS TO ELIMINATE TENSION

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens were introduced to yoga — a Hindu system of meditation — before their workout Friday, but Chicago Black Hawks should not expect to find them in a trance Sunday.

The Black Hawks and the Canadiens open their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final round here Sunday at noon.

Madan M. Bali, a native of Bombay who has conducted his own yoga school here for four years, introduced the players to science in an endeavor to produce a more relaxed attitude and better breathing.

Bali, who offers programs through the Montreal Catholic School Commission, said he had discussed the project with coach Scotty Bowman but the two had not been able to get together because of the team's hectic regular-season schedule.

He said the program offered the players is designed to improve their breathing even during games.

"All seemed to respond — some more than others," Bali said.

Bowman said he had tried the program himself and found it helped him to relax, but admitted that "I never tried it after games."

"I don't see how this could hurt anyone," Bowman said. "The idea is if anyone wants to try it he's here for them."

Reaction of the players appeared mixed as they left the workout with booklets outlining the program.

During the closed meeting that preceded the practice, Bali said he explained to the athletes that if they followed this program "their bodies would respond better" under the tension of Stanley Cup play.

Molly Deflates Egos

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — One disgruntled opponent became so upset after losing to Molly Hannas that he slammed his racket against a wall and shattered it.

"I don't really know if he was upset because I beat him or because he lost the match," said Molly, a 19-year-old MacAlester College co-ed from Kansas City, Mo., who has made the men's tennis team and may be deflating some male egos.

Molly currently ranks as the No. 2 singles player in the nine-school Minnesota Inter-Collegiate Athletic Conference. She has lost only one match, and that one to the No. 1 player.

"Everybody has been nice about it all," said Molly. "I came out on my own. Coach Jack Bachman told me I could play on the men's team if I could make it. I knew I could, and I had plenty of encouragement from the team."

Molly teams with John Molder to play doubles, and he thinks she has improved his play.

The left-handed Molly took up tennis eight years ago because "my parents play, and it's a good family sport."

"I don't have any plans of it's a good family sport."

"I don't have any plans of going on tour. I like to think I play in Billie Jean King's style, but I'd never be able to match her."

Molly said her opponents have not given her special treatment, and that no one has refused to play her.

ROY HASLAM

Good Crew, Haslam a Clicking Combo

By STEWART LANG
Times Staff

Expert help appears to be partially responsible for the number one position Roy Haslam currently enjoys among super-stock drivers at Western Speedway.

Haslam, who won his first main event since 1971 during the last time super-stocks ran at Western, April 15, leads the standings with 240 points, 53 more than runner-up Rick O'Dell.

"The car's working very well and I've got a good crew, which helps considerably," Haslam said Friday.

"There's some outstanding competition out there this year," he added. "You make one mistake and you can drop several positions."

Haslam's newly-built 1967 red, white and blue Chevelle receives the best of care. He is a welder-fabricator for an engineering firm in Victoria and can cut the cost of building a car in half by working on it himself.

Denny Rand, one of his crew members, is a mechanic by trade and another crewman, Dave Ferguson, works for a large downtown tire dealer. Both occupations help lend expertise to work in the pits.

Other crew members are Robert Pallister and Gary "Dunlop" Pepin, who co-own the car with Haslam, as well as Pallister's brother, Melvin, and Mike Newton.

Since stepping up to super-stock ranks six years ago, following a first-place finish in the stock car standings, Haslam's best finish was fourth two years ago. Four years ago he ran a season on the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing circuit in a car he owned with Joe Macmurchie.

Rick Cudby, meanwhile, leads the stock car standings with 225 points. Tony Johnson is second with 208.

Both Haslam and Cudby will be out to extend their leads in a combined stock-super-stock program starting with time trials at 1 p.m. Sunday.

One Pro Likes Pace, A Warning for Other

EARL DAVIES
. . . now he knows

One professional appreciates his new golf pace, and there may be a warning for the other pro still in contention for the CFAX-Vancouver Island Open golf championship.

The two pros tackle respected amateur rivals in Sunday's quarter-finals at Uplands Golf Club.

"With due respect to Dick Silverberg (beaten on the 22nd hole) and Bill Thompson (who bowed two up), Milliken could be my roughest opponent," Wakeham said following last Sunday's success over Thompson.

Wakeham could be hitting it closer to the truth than he intended. The 19-year-old Milliken counted four birdies en route to a one-under-par 69 in a practice round at Uplands on Wednesday.

Davies feels he is "playing far better golf" than he did during his title victory in 1970.

"I feel I'm a much better golfer. I feel I know more about how to play, especially being able to slow down. Pacing yourself is important," said Davies.

Wintemute, a 10-handicapper, faces MacLeod while Richards and Gray, both making their first appearance in the eights, lock up in the day's other duel.

Quarter-finalists in the handicap section start the day's action at 10 a.m. Championship twosomes start moving on the first tee at 10:20.

Survivors move to Colwood on May 6 for the 36-hole semi-finals with the championship matches scheduled May 13 at Glen Meadows.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:
Play without spikes
I ALWAYS FALL BACK ON MY LONG-IRON SHOTS, GARY!
I'VE NOTICED IT, TOM. YOU NEED TO IMPROVE YOUR BALANCE
AT ONE TIME, I HAD A LOT OF TROUBLE WITH THIS MYSELF. WHAT HELPED ME MOST WAS PRACTICING IN ORDINARY LEATHER-SOLED SHOES WITH NO SPIKES
THIS FORCED ME TO THINK ABOUT STAYING IN PERFECT BALANCE, OTHERWISE I RISKED FALLING FLAT ON MY BACK
I STILL PRACTICE LIKE THIS OCCASIONALLY, AND I RECOMMEND THAT YOU DO TOO

Bantams Honored

KAMLOOPS — Victoria-area players reaped some of the final honors when the second annual Kamloops international bantam hockey tournament wound up Friday before a packed crowd of 3,600 fans that included Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his wife, Margaret.

Victoria's McDonald's Bread captured "C" division honors by defeating the Saskatchewan Federation of Indians from Gravelbourg 8-5.

In addition, Murray Slezak of Saanich Braves was singled out as an all-star defenceman.

North Shore Winter Club captured top honors by defeating Quesnel 8-7 while Prince George took the "B" championship with a 7-5 victory over North Kamloops.

George Fritz, who scored five goals in a 6-3 Thursday win over Delta, counted four more times Friday to lead Victoria in the "C" finale. Brian Birks, with two, Mike Shields and Wayne Proceviat were Victoria's other marksmen.

Peterson also was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Approval of Players Required for Truce

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association and the opposition cigarette-company sponsored women's circuit Friday reached a peace agreement which now must be approved by the players themselves.

"We will canvas the players . . . and should have a decision early next week," a spokeswoman for the touring women's group said.

Walter Elcock of Boston, president of the USITA, and Josephy Cullman, chairman of the tobacco company, reached the agreement in the presence of four representatives of the circuit — Billie Jean King, Francoise Durr, Betty Stove and Julie Heldman.

A formal statement said the two groups had come to an agreement under which the USLTA would sanction the remaining tournaments of the 1973 calendar and all the tournaments in 1974.

Under these terms, such leading players as Mrs. King, Miss Durr and Nancy Richey Gunter would be eligible to compete in the major national champions sanctioned by the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

These include the French championships, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

Three players were tied for second place, defending champion Betty Burfeindt, Joanne Prentice and Jane Blalock. They had one-under-par 71s.

'New' Dickson Keeps Cool As Dunker Follows Birds

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Dickson had a chance to fall back Friday in the second round of the Byron Nelson golf tournament, but he became the leader in a situation that would have unraveled him two years ago.

Dickson, beginning to flash the promise expected of him when he came out of the amateur ranks of Oklahoma State in 1967, shot a four-under-par 66 to take a one-stroke edge at the 36-hole mark over Don Bies of Seattle, the first round leader.

The big test for Dickson, who made birdie putts of eight, 10, 12 and three feet, came at the 553-yard, par-five 15th hole when he dunked his second shot in a lake. His fourth shot sailed over the green but he saved par with a 40-foot putt off the fringe.

"I've been playing with confidence since I won at San Diego," Dickson said. "That was a good save I made. I've been in this position before and blown the whole round. Now, I just play it low key and get my par."

Dickson, who was the first man since Bobby Jones to capture the American and British amateur titles in one year, won his first professional tournament as a rookie, the Haig Open in 1968.

He has struggled until this year when he took the San Diego Open.

"My confidence is riding at a peak . . . it's fun while it lasts," Dickson said.

Dickson's 135 total was five under par over the 6,932-yard Preston Trail Country Club layout.

Bies bogied three of the first five holes but rallied to add a one-over-par 71 to his first round 65.

Tigers 'Find' Goalies In Time for Playoffs

SASKATOON — The goaltending that Medicine Hat "wasn't supposed to have" has given the Tigers a stranglehold on the Western Canada Junior Hockey League championship.

With the fifth game scheduled Sunday in Medicine Hat, the Tigers need only one more victory to wrap up the best-of-seven playoff. Tigers lead 2-0 with two games tied.

The Tigers took charge Friday with a dramatic 5-4 victory, getting the winning goal from Lanny McDonald while playing shorthanded and with only seven seconds remaining in regulation time.

The goal was McDonald's second of the game. Barry Dean also counted twice for the Hatters while Ed Johnstone added the other. Ron Ashton, George Pesut, Ralph Klassen and Byron Jackson scored for Saskatoon before 4,478 fans.

Medicine Hat goaltender Jerry Thomas was one of the game's stars as he stopped 24 Saskatoon shots. He made five consecutive saves late in the first period with the score 2-0 for the Blades and Tiger defenceman Jim McCrimmon in the penalty box.

"People said we had no goaltending," said Medicine Hat coach Jack Shupe, "but all of a sudden I have two goaltenders to choose from. Both Thomas and Sam Clegg have played well in the series."

Clegg, who played the first two games in Medicine Hat, both ending in ties, is expected to start Sunday.

Hole-in-One Caps Gorge Gang's Day

Friday was a good day for the Gorge Gang.

Verle McKeown added the extra frill with a hole-in-one while Gorge clubmate Agnes Castle and Flora Clark walked off with medal honors.

Mrs. McKeown, playing with partner Joy Parsons, Kay Craig and Joan Perks of Royal Colwood and Lilla Mess and Muriel Elliott of Cedar Hill, scored the ace on the Meadows' 17th hole.

It was a timely shot. The McKeown-Parsons pairing finished with a net 77½ to assure themselves of one of the 16 berths in the championship flight.

The Castle-Clark partnership tied Gorge clubmates Peg Matthews and Marj Nelson for medallist honors after both pairings finished with net 73s. The tie was broken by retrogression count-back.

Gorge golfers picked off five of the 16 berths. Glen Meadows and Colwood pairings each claimed four spots while Uplands landed two and Nanaimo's Betty Pegues and Maxine Danielson took the remaining berth.

Jet Goalies Are Sizzling

BOSTON (CP) — New England Whalers were the highest scoring team in the World Hockey Association during the regular season and they enjoyed some of their most productive evenings against Winnipeg Jets.

But when the two clubs face off Sunday in the first game of the best-of-seven final for the World Trophy, the Whalers will find themselves going against red-hot goaltending.

Netminders Ernie Wakely and Joe Daley, the best goaltending tandem in the league through most of the season, lost their bid for the goaltending award with a late-season letdown but regained their form in the playoffs.

In eliminating Houston Aeros in four games in the semi-final the two allowed just three goals, with Wakely getting shutouts both times he played.

"I had a little help from the Big Fellow upstairs," the goaltender said. "I also had a lot of help from the defence. The guys in front of me did a tremendous job."

Wakely and the maskless Daley will have to continue their outstanding play through the final series for the Jets to overcome the powerful Whalers, Eastern Division champions who waltzed past the Winnipeg club in five of their six meetings this year.

New England outscored the Jets 32-19 in regular season meetings, with the Whalers' big line of Larry Pleau, Tim Sheehy and John French accounting for eight goals.

But the best sharpshooter against Winnipeg was Tom Webster, who beat the Jets goalies six times.

Against New England, Wakely had a goals-against average of 4.00 while Daley was 6.33, well above their regular season averages of 3.16 and 2.90 respectively.

Coming off the Houston series, playing coach Bobby Hull says it is his club that has the hot goaltending going into the final.

Fivepinners Shoot For Titles Sunday

Fivepinners will drop the curtain Sunday on their portion of the Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

They'll be gunning for titles and trophies at Gibson's Bowladrome in the 10th annual Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs, starting their bids in the three-game, scratch event at 1:30 p.m.

Tenpinners, who also earned rolloff berths by winning weekly awards in the 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest, will wait until May 6 for their shots at cash and crowns on the boards at Mayfair Lanes.

At stake in each of the four rolloffs — one for men and one for women in both fivepins and tenpins — will be a Times Trophy. An additional award is a $100 bonus prize that goes to any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times.

Should two or more contestants finish in a tie for first place in any rolloff, the title will go to the bowler rolling the highest single game. If that fails to break the deadlock, the one with the best second-highest single-game score will be declared the winner.

In Sunday's fivepin scramble, Stan Jones and May Wallis will each be attempting to become the first three-time winner of a Times rolloff championship.

Mrs. Wallis set the pace for distaff fivepinners in 1965 and 1969 while Jones collected the men's crown in 1964 and 1971.

Highest scores posted among the 26 women's qualifiers in this season's contest was the 363-303-318—984 tally notched by Dorothy Krimmer.

ASBESTEX insulates, beautifies and protects for over 20 YEARS, it weatherproofs and is available in over 3,000 colours.

APPLIED WITH A GUN
ASBESTEX is applied with heavy duty spray equipment under high pressures. It fuses itself to any wall surface to a thickness of up to 20 TIMES thicker than ordinary paint.

ELIMINATES PAINTING
Since 1933, over a million buildings have been coated and ASBESTEX is thus the outcome of field laboratory tests by qualified chemists and 40 years of continuous research, which has now provided the ultimate in exterior coatings and most attractive exterior surfacing modern science can create.

ECONOMICAL
ASBESTEX is not a new product, but the cost has been so prohibitive up until a few years ago, that only large industries and corporations have had the means to use it. Thanks to the advancement in chemical technology, new powerful super spraying equipment, automated faster manufacturing processes and larger volume, ASBESTEX is now only ONE-THIRD the cost of what it used to be.

FACTORY GUARANTEED
Every ASBESTEX job is registered and factory guaranteed for 20 YEARS against peeling, chipping and flaking. ASBESTEX is the only coating with this UNQUALIFIED GUARANTEE.

BOOK ME!! THAT'S WHAT THEY DID

LONDON (AP) — Male stripper Angel Lane feels he gets a raw deal.

So Angel, real name Reg, peeled down to a black G-string, handcuffed himself to the railings outside the Houses of Parliament and had the key thrown into the nearby Thames.

The shivering stripper held high a banner demanding: Equal rights for male strippers. Men — burn your underpants.

Another declared boldly: The body divine — Angel, the lovely male stripper. Book him.

HANGING AROUND the playground means just that to these children in Hamilton, Ont., now that the weather has warmed up enough for them to get out of doors and gather in Eastwood Park in that city's north end. Climbing the fence makes a break from softball, anyway, as well as limbering up winter-weary muscles.

BEER CHEAPER THAN MILK

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — The 104 residents of Grise Fiord have been hit so hard by rising food prices they are appealing to Northwest Territories commissioner Stuart Hodgson.

Hunters at the settlement are able to catch whales, seals, walrus and fish but must rely on the south for their dried or canned vegetables, sugar, butter, flour and other staples.

A glass of milk costs $1 — 20 cents more than a can of beer. A small steak at a restaurant costs $10.95 and a head of lettuce sells for $1.15.

At Pond Inlet, hunters say even the cost of the meat they kill for themselves is getting ridiculous.

They told Commissioner Hodgson that by the time they pay $7 for 20 rifle shells, $40 for a 10-day supply of food and $163 for 100 gallons of gasoline their caribou meat costs $2 a pound.

BRYAN'S BEAT

An Immediate Need Filled

By BRYAN HAY
Times Staff

As I was saying when I was so rudely interrupted . . .

However, it's back to business as usual in my space following an appointment with a knife at St. Joe's and the only trouble is my doctors told me not to lose my temper for a while.

So, only nice thoughts this week and next — then, perhaps, I'll permit myself a little flareup again.

For openers: It's not very often I can find anything pleasant to say about Ritchie Yorke, one-time pop pundit who has become the self-styled grand guru of mod music in this country.

Today I can.

One of Yorke's many enterprises happens to be Love Productions which releases albums on the Daffodil label via an arrangement with Capitol.

While many of the artists in the Love stable are merely tepid Torontonians, the organization has just spewed forth a blockbuster series of albums lifted directly from British master tapes which goes a long way to filling the gaps in any rock collection.

Most of the albums — by groups such as the Nice, Humble Pie and Small Faces — have been released in one form or another in this country.

But it has long been a favorite trick of North American record companies to mess with the masters before making a waxing for this side of the water — for example, just compare the British and U.S. versions of the Beatles' Revolver album.

You'll find whole tracks just up and gone, replaced for the North American market with cuts that were released Over 'Ome as singles or tucked away in other albums, some of which were never released in this country.

Lord knows the logic behind the manoeuvre — it's just one of those irritating facts of life in the record industry.

This latest labor of Love, however, has merely pulled the original masters of the albums in question and repressed them — amazingly enough keeping the original high calibre of British engineering — the only kind of engineering done by the British which seems to stand up any more, it seems — and stereo quality.

All of these albums, incidentally, were originally released in the U.K. on the Immediate label, one of Britain's top pop labels.

Real standout among the series — or what of it has been released so far — is the first two discs of the famed Anthology of British Blues.

This contains some solid tracks from early performances by such greats as John Mayall, Jo-Anne Kelly, Savoy Brown and Eric Clapton and Jimmy Page gigging together.

As an added bonus on some of the tracks on Volume One, backup harp and bass are provided by Mick Jagger and Bill Wyman, members of no mean a little rock and roll band themselves — which gives you some idea of how far back into the early Sixties some of these cuts go.

You can recognize all of the Immediate series by their distinctive silver jackets.

All in all, well worth checking out to fill a few gaps in your collection.

These days I really seem to be going for baroque!

And, one gem that recently passed my way is an album entitled England by Amazing Blondel (Island SW-9327).

The original Amazing Blondel was a dude who teetered across Niagara Falls on a high-wire somewhere in the middle of the last century.

His latter-day counterpart moves very smoothly along the fine line separating folk, Handel and pop.

This is an album which really falls into no classification musically but manages by sheer virtuosity not to totter into the torrent of failure.

It could almost fall into the "easy listening" category — if it weren't for the flute, hauntingly reminiscent of Ian Anderson's (Jethro Tull.)

There have been many attempts recently to move the classics into a pop idiom — some successful, some dismal flops.

Bible, Darwin Equal

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Forty-eight years after Tennessee's famed Scopes trial, the Tennessee house of representatives has voted to give most theories of man's creation equal emphasis in the public schools.

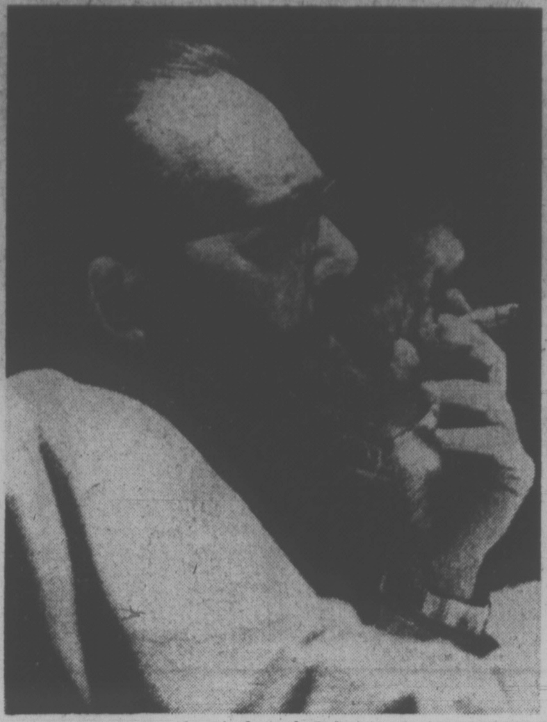
Among the explanations of man's origins to be given equal weight in school textbooks by the bill is the one found in the Bible's Book of Genesis and Charles Darwin's theory of evolution.

The house approved the measure 69 to 15 Thursday after amending it to classify the Bible as a reference work so it would not have to be treated legally as a textbook and to ban the teaching of occult and satanic theories of creation.

The bill now goes back to the senate for approval of the house amendments.

The Tennessee legislature repealed six years ago the law under which the late John T. Scopes, then 25, was prosecuted at Dayton, Tenn. Scopes was convicted of violating a law prohibiting the teaching of all evolution theory and was fined $100.

The fine subsequently was overturned on a technicality.



Prof. Richard Courtney

Arts Conference Picks Westerner

Responding to the clear call for decentralization sounded at the Canada West conference of the arts held at Calgary last October, for the first time a president from Western Canada has been appointed by the Canadian Conference of the Arts in Ottawa.

The CCA is the "facilitator" between the arts community and all levels of government. From it the Canada Council was formed.

As a result of recent regional conferences (one was held for the theatre. He is a distin- in Victoria sponsored jointly by the Community Arts Council and UVic fine arts department), the arts community presented a cultural state-of-the-nation report contained in the document, Direction Canada.

This went to all levels of government.

Students Offer 30 Short Plays

Ten sessions involving 30 one-act plays make the 1973 Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival one of the biggest in its 33-year history.

Hosted by various schools, it will take place starting Friday through May 12.

Secondary schools will occupy the evenings, starting Friday at Lansdowne Junior.

Monday, May 7 through Thursday, May 11, elementary school entries will be presented in the afternoons at 1:30 p.m.

This year's adjudicators are both from University of Victoria theatre department. They are Esse W. Ljungh, widely known Canadian stage, radio and television director, for the senior section, and Giles Hogya for the elementary.

The festival will end May 12 with a gala performance at Victoria Secondary School, consisting of a program of three good plays selected by the adjudicators.

Friday's opening performance, beginning at 7:30 p.m., will consist of two plays from Oak Bay Senior — Anastasia and Chefoff's The Marriage Proposal — The Light from Oak Bay Junior and Lansdowne's presentation of The Servant of Two Masters.

There will be no program Saturday, May 5.

Other schools entered are, at the elementary level, Calvin Christian School, Hillcrest, Uplands, Glenlyon, Fairburn, Blanshard, Victoria West and Bank Street.

Secondary schools are Victoria, Colquitz, Norfolk House, Cedar Hill, North Saanich, Mount Douglas, Glenlyon and Norfolk House combined, Highrock, Mount View, and S. J. Willis.

Arion Choir Competes

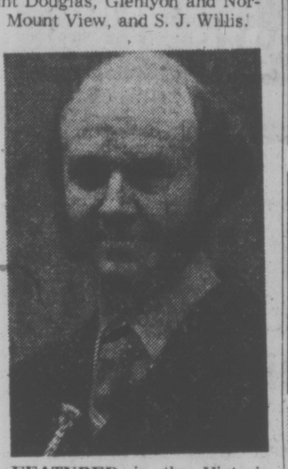
Victoria's Arion Male Voice Choir will travel to Vancouver on Wednesday to appear at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in the 50th anniversary highlights concert of the Vancouver Music Festival.

The 50-voice choir, conducted by Bert Storar, won the community choir B.C. open competition and the male choir division of the mainland festival.

As a result they were awarded the Burns Company Cup and Trail Lodge Knights of Pythias Shield by British adjudicator Charles Beardsall.

This is the second year Arion has won the community choir award.

Their successful festival work has led to the choir being recommended — and now entered — for the National Choral Competition in a bid to win the City of Lincoln Trophy.



FEATURED in the Victoria Symphony pop concert Sunday at Memorial Arena, is the Symphony's brilliant first trumpet, Boyde Hood. He will be heard in the popular virtuoso number by LeRoy Anderson, Trumpeter's Lullaby. Hood, who is an assistant professor in the Faculty of Music, University of Victoria, was formerly principal trumpet with Dallas Symphony, four years with the Eastman Philharmonia and four years solo cornet with the Eastman Wind Ensemble. The tuneful strongly Russian-flavored program will be shared by the CFB Naden Band, and massed bands from Mount Douglas, Oak Bay, Mount View and Esquimalt senior secondary schools. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Golda May Run

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli Premier Golda Meir has decided to run again in October, the newspaper Haaretz reports.

Mrs. Meir's office had no immediate comment. For the last two years the 74-year-old premier has been saying she would like to retire. But other leaders of the ruling Labor party fear no generally acceptable successor can be found.

Unemployed--- Actor or Not

After starting his artistic career as a painter and then becoming an interior decorator, Paul Liitich says he "sort of fell into theatre."

It happened when he accidentally inherited the role of an indisposed actor in a pantomine performance in Brantford, Ont.

He then worked with amateur theatre for about three years and was associated with Elizabeth Gorrie and Barbara McLauchlin in a Brantford undertaking entitled Total Theatre.

That venture folded due to lack of funds and the Gorries, Barb McLauchlin and Paul eventually all came together again under Victoria's Bastion Theatre roof.

Here, since Colin and Elizabeth Gorrie's recent departure for Winnipeg, Paul has inherited another role—director of senior classes at Bastion Theatre School with Barb as administrator and chief instructors, Margaret Martin, Jean-Paul Destrube and Valerie Lewis.

His work with the school is mainly in the area of improvisation, developing and expanding imagination and originality.

At the moment he is spending creative energy designing and making bird and animal masks for end-of-term performances due to take place in a few weeks time.

The masks are constructed of papier mache and delightfully invested with humor and individuality.

Paul will go East for acting jobs in the summer but will definitely be back, he says.

The fact that there will be no Bastion Studio company entertaining visitors and residents with repertory in the loft theatre at 538 Yates Street, this summer, is much to be regretted, he feels.

"People really enjoyed the performances last year." (The company did Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris, and Tom Jones among other things).

The summer rep was funded by an LIP grant but was turned down on its second application.

"The silly part of it is," says Paul, "that the company members were then among the unemployed and had to start collecting unemployment insurance."

It is strongly believed by many that a well known Vancouver hot-liner and a couple of politicians influenced the blocking of the renewal of LIP grants to theatres and other cultural-entertainment organizations.

"The LIP grants were probably only intended as a launching aid," admits Canadian-born Paul Liitich.

But he can't help wondering, quite reasonably, how there can be differentation between one form of employment and another at the subsidy level, but not when it comes to unemployment insurance.

So no Bastion summer theatre for adult audiences this year but there will be free children's shows in Bastion and Centennial Squares, an outdoor highlight since 1969.

Final choice, among several plays being considered, rests with director Peter Mannering who is now visiting theatre centres in England and Europe.

Ship Jumpers Denied Asylum

VANCOUVER (CP) — Applications for political asylum by three Yugoslavs who jumped ship here last year have been rejected by the immigration department. A fourth is still under consideration.

Phil Hassett, an immigration enforcement supervisor, said Friday the men will be granted formal hearings as seamen deserters. They will have the right to appeal if ordered deported.

Amity Singers in 13th Year

It is almost 13 years since a casual sing-along group of Victoria College students began to do some serious work on the art of ensemble singing under the direction of choral conductor Rodney Webster.

After graduation most of the group stayed together and formed the Amity Singers, which in eight years progressed and established a fine reputation for the quality of their musicianship.

At the end of that time, pressures on Webster of being vice principle of Victoria Conservatory of Music and musical director of the Victoria Choral Society, forced the conductor to curtail his activities.

Direction of the Amity Singers then passed to UVic's George Corwin.

The reputation of Amity has continued to grow under Corwin. Last season they taped a CBC radio broadcast and appeared with Victoria Symphony in performances of the Horn-Schiffrin Jazz Mass.

This season Amity has performed for capacity audiences in Ladysmith and Victoria.

On May 6 and 7, at MacLaurin Auditorium, the ensemble will be heard in its eighth annual scholarship concert.

Conducted by Corwin, works to be performed are the Bach Motet VI and Cantata No. 150, three Shakespeare songs by Vaughan Williams, three songs by Debussy, Choral Dances from Benjamin Britten's Gloriana and four choruses from Carl Orff's opera, Catulli Carmina.

All works will be sung unaccompanied except the cantata which will have an instrumental accompaniment consisting of violins Rollyn Morris and Richard Barker; cello, Linda Hougland-Daniels; string bass, Thomas Fyles; bassoon, Rudolf Komorous, and harpsichord, James Furmston.

Proceeds from the concerts will provide financial assistance to deserving voice students at Victoria Conservatory of Music and the university.

Concert times are 2:30 p.m. on May 6 and 8 p.m. on May 7.

Tickets may be ordered in advance by phoning Mrs. Roberta May, 598-2446.

Any unreserved will be available at the door.

Escape Try Fails

HELMFSEDT (Reuter) — East German border guards shot and killed two men as they tried to escape last weekend by driving a truck through border barriers, West German customs officials here said Friday. Earlier West German reports of the incident said the men in the truck were killed when it hit a concrete pillar.

French Connection Spawns Twins

NEW YORK (AP) — The French Connection spawned more than just a Son of French Connection. It had twins.

There's going to be a sequel, in Paris, with Gene Hackman going there and teaming up with a gendarme played by Jean-Paul Belmondo to look for the French man that got away at the end of The French Connection.

And on the streets of New York, Roy Schneider, who played Hackman's sidekick, Buddy, in The French Connection is starring in a movie based on the future adventures of Buddy — that is Sonny Grosso, tthe real cop on which the character is based.

And this movie has The French Connection's chase scene man.

The movie is titled The Seven Ups, a special squad of police detectives who try to catch felons whose crimes will send them to prison for seven years or more.

TRAFFIC THINNED OUT

On 10th Avenue, a wide, north-bound street favored by truckers on the West Side of Manhattan, uniformed policemen in the blocks north of 42nd Street are standing in the street, letting only a few cars at a time past them, thinning down the traffic ahead. They're real cops. The detectives in the movie are in plainclothes.

Below 47th Street, three cars with cameras mounted on bumpers and in back seats have been parked on a sidewalk during a lunch break.

Two of the cars are pushed into the street and stuntmen get behind the wheels.

One driver starts his siren and the chase has begun, fast, heavily insured and somewhat unpredictable, through real—though thinned —New York traffic.

Producer-director Phil D'Antni, 44, was the producer of Bullitt and The French Connection and the architect of their chase scenes; he now is directing for the first time.

"This chase scene will cost the same as the others," D'Antoni says. "The only way you can gauge that is the amount of days. We're scheduled, as in Bullitt and The French Connection, for two weeks, give or take a day.

"Roy and I went to a film. 'The Burglars,' that had one of the best chase scenes ever — technically fantastic — but nobody gave a damn about it.

"The only conceptual thing I've tried to use is to make the chase fit the protagonist. In Bullitt I would say that the chase we used was rather sophisticated and straight on, slick, with high speeds. It seemed to fit the character Steve McQueen played.

"In French Connection it was designed to fit Popeye Doyle played by Hackman. It was a hard-hitting, pushing one-dimensional kind of chase. He was ripping his car apart as he went along. It's the way we felt the Doyle character was.

"This chase is much slicker than Doyle's. Buddy in a sense looks to take a beating at the end of this chase, but he comes back at the end of the picture and gets on top. That's the kind of guy Buddy is.

"Our whole secret is to get you emotionally involved. We try to root you in so much reality prior to the case, in the rest of the film, that the audience believes what they are seeing is almost a documentary. Then when they get to the chase, they are able to suspend a certain amount of belief and allow us to take liberties when we do the chase."

POPULATION EXPLOSION

TORONTO (CP) — It's impossible to explain conservation to a Giant Canada Goose, especially when she's sitting in a nest in a willow tree brout 15 feet from the ground.

Officials of the ministry of natural resources were confronted with the problem again when they raided 13 nests on the Toronto Islands and took 64 eggs.

"Heck," said conservation officer Ken Faulkner, "We don't like doing it but we have to."

The big, beautiful, six-to-eight-pound birds, which stay year-round on the islands and vicinity, are multiplying and in many cases taxing nesting areas.

The ministry has several other reasons for taking the eggs, incubating them at the Orillia Rod and Gun Club facilities and then releasing them again to the wilds.

Of paramount concern this year is the high water, six of the nests discovered this week would have been lost had the water risen another eight inches and most authorities predict a rise of that much is possible. The ministry took 69 eggs last week, of which 19 were cold and abandoned near the water line.

The 69 were taken from the airport at the island as a precautionary step. The eggs are no real problem but when the goslings arrive, mothers insist of leading their young for strolls on the runway.

"We didn't even start collecting eggs until May 10 last year," said Faulkner, adding that of more than 100 collected in 1972, there was an 87-per-cent survival rate during incubation.

The ministry is concerned by the population explosion. There were two geese on the island in the early 1960s and now there are more than 800.

DRY SUMMER DUE

OTTAWA (CP) — A National Capital Commission plan to create a beer-and-sandwiches outdoor cafe in Confederation Square has been rejected by the Ontario liquor licence board.

The cafe, which would have been beside the government conference centre, formerly Union Station, would have opened in June. The idea drew enthusiastic support from Ottawa's municipal government.

But a brief letter from licence board Chairman James Mackey, received by the NCC Friday, gives no reason for the refusal.

An NCC spokesman said a provincial licence may not be required because the proposed location is on federal property. But the NCC does not intend to get involved in a constitutional argument, he said.

He Captured Bolshevik Revolution on Film

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a film in the United States storage vault that long has been an irritating thorn in the Soviet Union's side. It is Tsar to Lenin, an historical documentary of the Russian Revolution as well as a portrait of the men and events surrounding that 1917 insurrection.

The film, which is a part of a far larger Russian film archive, belongs to Herman Axelbank, a film-maker who devoted a lifetime to tracking down and snaring film of the Russian Revolution and the period preceding and succeeding it.

By a twist of history, Russian representatives now are negotiating with Axelbank for the acquisition of his film, available nowhere else.

Josef Stalin, in his long battle to have opponents in his country liquidated and to remove all memories and associations embarrassing to him, ordered vast amounts of film destroyed.

Axelbank, a man whose vigor and unbounded verbal energies belie his 72 years, has spent more than half a century gathering footage of the Russian Revolution.

His film-hunting expeditions took him into Russia and to scattered sections of the globe. He has built up the most extensive film archive on Russia of the Tsarist, Leninist and Stalinist era.

So complete is his archive that the Russians have come to him many times for footage.

Axelbank has amassed more than 5,000 reels of film.

The way he collected the footage for his Russian archives often made his life rival the melodrama of a movie thriller.

Fascinated from boyhood by motion pictures, Axelbank got his first job as an office boy to Samuel Goldfish, who later became movie studio owner Samuel Goldwyn. Axelbank moved on to become an assistant cameraman.

In 1917, on a snowy March afternoon, he spotted a newspaper headline: Revolution in Russia.

"I wish I could take motion pictures over there," he mused.

The idea took hold and he was to devote the rest of his life to a worldwide search for all the eyewitness films ever taken in Russia during, prior and following the civil war.

The Mystery Is So Easy to Understand

Perspectives and Prejudices

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The disciples could not understand what had happened. Jesus had warned them that he must die, but they hadn't believed him: they thought he had been speaking in riddles, using figurative language with hidden meanings.

It had happened so quickly. One of them betrayed him to the authorities. Then the sudden trials before the Sanhedrin and the Roman governor. With great haste he was hanged on a cross — and in three hours he was dead.

This is not what the disciples had expected. They didn't know what to make of it. Their Master, whom they believed to be the Messiah sent by God for the salvation of all men, had been ignominiously put to death as a common criminal. And they began to fear for their own safety: after all, they had been his accomplices.

Then on the third day some of Jesus' women followers went to the tomb in which his body had been laid, taking with them spices for the neglected office of embalmment. They found that the stone which closed the tomb had been rolled away. They stood there, incredulous and perplexed and frightened.

Then, as Luke reports, two men in dazzling apparel appeared and said to them, "Why do you seek the living among the dead? He is not here, but has risen."

The women then went to the disciples and told them about this. But, Luke tells, "These words seemed to them an idle tale, and they did not believe them."

Slowly the disciples came out of their despair and doubt and came to accept the fact that the crucifixion was not the end of Jesus. And it was out of the disciples' awareness of the risen Christ, out of their experience of the Resurrection, that came the Christian faith and the Christian Church.

The details of the Resurrection are shrouded in the mists of history. There are serious inconsistencies in the accounts of it given in the four Gospels. The "how" of the Resurrection we cannot determine. But the reality of the Resurrection-experience of the followers of Jesus persists. The rise of the Christian movement, including the writing and selection of the documents which comprise the New Testament, can be accounted for only in terms of the Resurrection-experience.

Christian faith is not simply a matter of approving a body of teaching given out by a great man nearly 20 centuries ago. The Church is not simply a memorial society, a sort of Jesus fan-club. The Church is the community of the Resurrection, a fellowship created by the power of the Rusurrection which has been sustained through the centuries by experience of its living Lord. That is the reality of Easter.

Former Fiji Policeman Hotfoots After the Tourist Dollar

By RANDI ROSENBLUM

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Fereimi Waqa from Beqa used to walk on fire for God. Now he does it for the tourists.

And an ex-policeman with a wild aloha shirt and a Fiji skirt explains it all to the tourists in a heavy New Zealand accent.

Duty-free shops line the streets of the Victorian town of Suva. New hotels border the stately waterfront of the former British colony.

Tourism, officials explain, is the only industry that can expand fast enough to provide jobs for more than 10,000 young people who graduate from school each year.

As island paradises go, this South Pacific island, 1,200 miles east of Australia, is second only to Tahiti. But unlike other paradises, it has no season—just a steady rush.

One of Fiji's chief assets is its people. "Our whole image of friendliness goes away if tourists don't mix with the locals," says an official of the Visitors Bureau.

The islands' half million residents usually are willing to share their lives and customs with strangers. But some customs change in the process.

RULES MODIFIED

When the people of Beqa Island decided several years ago to do their famous fire-walking for the tourists they had to change some of the rules.

In times past, a fire-walker had to abstain from sex and coconuts for two weeks before the ritual. With a show somewhere in Fiji six times a week, they now get only four days' abstinence between shows.

"After you walk on fire, you feel different—changed," mused one old Beqa man. "But when it's for tourists, it's not the same."

The Visitors Bureau has a vigorous policy to help promote more contact between the islanders and their guests. It publishes two booklets, one with a cover drawing of coins marching called The Tide Is Coming In, explaining to Fijians what's in it for them as tourism expands.

"When you hear of 100 new hotel rooms, you'll know that there are new jobs for 150 people," it says.

Last year Fiji added 600 new rooms for a total of nearly 3,000, a huge jump from the 388 rooms 10 years earlier.

MOST NEAR SUVA

Most of the 70-odd hotels are on the main island of Viti Levu, clustering around the capital of Suva. And most have been put up with foreign money.

Land on the 106 inhabited islands of the Fiji group generally is held communally and cannot be sold. Hotels lease the land from the villages.

"This way we make sure of local involvement," says an official.

Privately-held land is rare but some investors have been lucky, including TV actor Raymond Burr who owns an island retreat off Suva.

It was hoped that Fijians would build vacation homes and rent them to tourists in a 1,500-acre development at Pacific Harbor, 26 miles to the south. But local response has been poor and most of the homesites have been sold to Londoners looking for vacation homes.

"Now there is some government trepidation that Pacific Harbor is going to turn into a big enclave of wealth and whiteness," observed one long-time resident.

COVERED ICE RINK FOR ARCTIC TOWN

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — A community centre will be built at Cambridge Bay on Victoria Island, 180 miles above the Arctic Circle, the territorial government announced today. The centre, expected to cost more than $250,000, will include a three-sheet curling rink, an ice arena, an adult education centre, settlement council offices, radio broadcasting facilities, a public library and a lounge. Hugh Stevenson, area supervisor of local government, said the community has raised $95,000 and plans to finance the remainder through various grant systems.

WELFARE: Ministers Pray Dough Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — The ingredients for an overhaul of Canada's social security programs have been blended and put through three days of kneading.

And welfare ministers, heading home after a federal-provincial conference that ended Friday, may well have been praying that the dough will rise.

That homespun analogy was used by Newfoundland welfare minister Ank Murphy—an employer of colorful phrases dressed in an Irish brogue—as ministers summed up results of their efforts to reform the welfare system.

Mr. Murphy was comparing the mixing of opinions at the conference to the way his mother made bread.

After the blending was done she would pray: "Please, God, let the dough rise."

The ministers departed in an apparently-optimistic frame of mind, having adopted as an "appropriate basis" for an overhaul the 14-point blueprint set out in the Commons last week by federal Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

INCREASE UNANIMOUS

Included in the set of federal proposals were average family allowance payments of $20, up from the present $7.21; amendments to the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) and guaranteed inncomes and income supplements for disadvantaged groups such as the working poor, the aged and the disabled.

The ministers unanimously adopted at the three-day meeting the bid to raise the family allowances, which will be made taxable. The allowances will probably go up Jan. 1, 1974. Provincial governments will have the right to vary the level of payments, provided national minimums set by Parliament are met.

Also accepted was a general proposal to amend the Canada Pension Plan, but details of the changes will be worked out by a committee including deputy ministers of welfare of the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Lalonde had suggested that CPP payments be escalated annually by the rise in the cost-of-living and that the level of maximum pensionable earnings, on which benefits are based, be raised to $7,800 by 1975.

Present maximum pensionable earnings are about $5,600 and the CPP escalator is two per cent.

Ontario and Manitoba had suggested other CPP changes.

One from Ontario's minister Rene Brunelle proposed that maximum pensionable earnings be raised to $9,500 by 1975. Another suggested persons between 60 and 65 be eligible on a voluntary basis for reduced benefits if they left the labor force.

Mr. Lalonde told reporters after the meeting that the deputy ministers' committee should meet in May and that amendments could be formulated by September for the next joint ministers' conference.

SUBSTANTIAL CHANGES

It would be possible to have "pretty substantial" changes to CPP legislation introduced into the Commons then, he said. These might include alterations in the level of pensionable earnings and in the escalator as well as some technical changes that are not expected to be opposed by opposition parties.

One subject of much interest to the provincial welfare ministers dealt with employment strategies suggested in the federal blueprint that would eliminate disincentives to work, set up community employment programs and focus on manpower efforts of the governments.

Mark MacGuigan, parliamentary secretary to Manpower Minister Robert Andras, said provincial ministers were much concerned about finding jobs for people who are on welfare.

There were suggestions from some ministers that employers are not registering their job openings with manpower centres and that steps should be taken to require such action, Mr. MacGuigan said.

In matters concerning employment, the deputy minister of the manpower department and the Unemployment Insurance Commission chairman will be included on the special deputy ministers' committee.

Working parties will be set up also to consider various aspects of the overhaul, including those affecting social insurance, income guarantees and social services.

Talk on jurisdictional problems will be deferred until agreement is reached on what changes are required in the social security system.

COST UNKNOWN

Ministers departed the conference with little more knowledge of how much the overhaul will cost than when they arrived on Wednesday.

Financing of the programs was only discussed in general and hypothetical terms.

"We know that the funds to be required will be substantial," Mr. Lalonde said, adding that more will be known as the programs are fleshed out.

Only the cost of the family allowance proposals has been worked out in detail. Estimated cost of the proposed increases will be $800 million, bringing gross costs of the allowance program to about $1.8 billion.

Generally, the ministers seemed quite satisfied that substantial progress had been made toward the welfare program revision. Mr. Lalonde has set a target of three to five years for review and implementation of new plans.

Quebec's minister Claude Castonguay, who earlier this year had threatened to boycott the meeting if there were not improvements in the family allowance program, said new avenues had been opened up at the conference that could be very productive.

In their joint statement after the conference, all ministers agreed that the co-operation shown during the meeting "augurs well for the successful study of Canada's social security system."

Mr. Lalonde commented further that although there would be no immediate benefits for the public, there was hope for more efficient use of resources in the future.

"Taxpayers should be comforted," he said.

Saskatoon Gets New Terminal

SASKATOON (CP) — A new $3.3-million air terminal will be built in the city, Doug Lane of Winnipeg, regional director of the Ministry of Transport, announced Friday.

The new terminal will contain an expanded waiting area, air carrier facilities for baggage and cargo and air-bridge passenger loading.

Lane said the airport runway system will also be improved and extended. Work on the runway will start immediately. Construction on the terminal is scheduled to start in the fall, with completion expected in January, 1975.

Mayor Bert Sears said he will start immediate negotiations with the provincial government for a new road access to the airport.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

BIG-MOUTHED BABY PETS . . . have a tendency to gulp first and taste afterwards. Many times, obviously, they don't taste what they are swallowing at all. However, the oral orientation of the young stimulates them to stick whatever is handy — or unhandy, for that matter — into their mouths, if they can get it there, and swallow it if it is physically possible.

Taking this into account may mean a considerably longer-lived pet. It means keeping common household cleaners and chemicals of various kinds completely inaccessible. This may mean behind solid doors when you consider the capabilities of some climbing youngsters; kittens, for example.

Aside from poisons, foreign objects constitute the other large category of swallowables causing potentially serious illness or suicide. Foreign objects may be as mundane as accumulated wads of newspaper, or chunks of plastic wrap or foil, varying sized fruit pits and stones, multi-shaped chunks of bone, or various types of ribbon and string. (With kittens in particular it's often thread with or without needle attached.) Preventing pet diasters then, means a constant household put-away and pick-up campaign to keep any conceivable (and some nearly inconceivable) items out of the ever-open mouths of the young.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Tom, our male cat, has gotten into so much trouble with his romances that we are going to have him "dejuvenated" and we plan to keep him home and out of trouble from here on. We do want to breed him once, though, before the surgery. Our choice of females this time! He is only going to have one chance so we want it to be a good one. But he is a bit on the thin side. The question is should we go ahead and breed him the way he is or fatten him up a little first?

—R.B.

DEAR R.B.: You'd have to make a distinction between overweight and normal weight, of course. Certainly, it's true that the overweight male is easily exhausted and generally makes a poor sexual partner. There is a difference, however, between being lean and being worn to a frazzle. If you have been keeping Tom confined during this correspondence interval, he has undoubtedly had time to recuperate.

Big Boom in Arctic Oil 'Twenty Years Too Late'

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — A prominent Northwest Territories government official recently wished aloud that the big drive for Arctic oil had begun 15 to 20 years ago.

"We wouldn't have had all this trouble with the environmentalists," he said in a conversation in Yellowknife.

His irritation with environmental experts indicates the growing importance of environmental issues in the debate about hauling Arctic oil and gas out of Alaska, the Mackenzie River delta and the Arctic islands.

But are environmentalists any more than an annoying thorn in the side of government and industry? Do they influence decisions?

The discussion about transporting oil and gas through the Mackenzie River valley by pipeline or railway may provide answers.

Environmentalists can point to some gains.

Concern about the impact of hot-oil pipelines on frozen Arctic ground has prompted research on providing insulation to protect the ground.

Work on some parts of the Mackenzie Highway has been postponed until the effect of roadbuilding on the environment is carefully studied.

The government is examining a report suggesting that a railway over permanently-frozen land in the Mackenzie Valley would be a viable alternative to an oil pipeline.

An exhaustive study of the railway plan has been urged by the Canadian Wildlife Federation.

The pipeline-railway issue may prove a true test of the strength of the environmental group.

At the moment, the cards are stacked against them.

There is little enthusiasm in government circles for the railway idea. Review of the report submitted last June by the Canadian Institute of Guided Ground Transport at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., is proceeding slowly.

The government has ample information about the capital and operating costs of oil and gas pipelines, a northern affairs department source said. But much more work needs to be done on the railway proposal.

Applications for a pipeline carrying Alaska gas through the Mackenzie Valley to the United States markets are expected to be made to the National Energy Board this fall.

That will be long before studies of a railway alternative can be completed. At the moment, time seems to favor the pipeline.

Still, the railway has supporters and the pipeline faces a fight. Former prime minister John Diefenbaker, the Canadian Railway Labor Association and the Canadian National Railways have been publicly demanding consideration of the railway alternative.

A key element in the decision about transporting oil and gas out of the Arctic is cost.

A senior official in the northern affairs department says there is no proof that a railway could compete with a pipeline in terms of cost.

The Queen's University study estimated the construction cost of a 1,240-mile Arctic oil railway at $2.4 billion with an annual operating cost of $194 million.

COST BILLIONS

The cost of the gas pipeline alone has been estimated at $5.5 billion while the capital cost of an oil pipeline would be $4 billion. The additional cost of a road along the pipeline has been set at $130 million.

say the railway operating costs would be three times as much as pipeline expenditures. This is disputed by railway officials.

Obviously, the cost issue will not be settled until the government carries out a detailed study of the Arctic oil railway proposal.

Will cost factors outweigh environmental issues in the final decision about building a railway or pipeline?

They may, but Robert Bandeen, executive vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, said recently that the environment is more important. "There's certainly much less danger of an ecological disaster if we have a rail line up there, than if we use a pipeline."

Richard Passmore, executive director of the Canadian Wildlife Federation, said in an interview that Canada has no experience building pipelines in the Arctic but it has already successfully constructed rail lines in northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Mr. Passmore said he is concerned that a hot-oil pipeline might melt the permanently frozen ground along the Mackenzie Valley, possibly changing the drainage pattern of the area.

It also might lead to oil spilling from breaks in pipe sagging unsupported in melting ground, he said. The melting process would be slower with insulated pipe.

Environmentalists object to pipe being raised above the ground because they say it interferes with migration of animals and exposes the pipes to breakage.

Gas pipelines would be more acceptable to environmental experts because gas does not flow hot through pipes.

Mr. Passmore said the rail route favored by the Queen's study would interfere little with migrating caribou. The railway would run along the Mackenzie Valley to Trout River in the Northwest Territories.

He would like the railway alternative carefully examined but sources in the transport, energy and northern affairs departments were cool to the railway idea in recent interviews.

'Ton of Money' On Weston Colt After Trial Win

LONDON (Reuter) — British bookmakers have installed Canadian-owned Gospill Hill as an 8-1 favorite to win the Epsom Derby, Britain's top flat race of the year.

The Derby is to be run June 6. Gospill Hill had been among the 100-1 outsiders until his four-length victory in a Derby trial at Epsom.

BRUCE ROGER

Priceless flash pictures are lost every day because flash equipment is not in good working order. With the heaviest flash season over, now is the time to recheck your equipment.

Have the flash batteries tested; you may need new ones. Buy only those marked "Photo", "Photoflash", or "Alkaline"; ordinary flashlight batteries are too weak. Have them tested before buying. Have the flash contacts checked for corrosion and dirt, and the wires checked for any breaks. Before loading a new film in an Instamatic, remove the flash batteries, put a flashcube into the socket, trip the shutter several times. This cleans the shutter contacts and the rotating cube cleans the socket contacts.

Last-Minute Tax Scramble? Not in City.

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Nearly 200,000 Vancouver Island residents must file tax returns by midnight Monday, but while other tax offices this week were jammed with last-minute filers trying desperately to figure out the new tax forms, Victoria's Vancouver Street office was running smoothly and quietly.

"We pride ourselves that no one waits more than 10 minutes," said Paddy Muller, chief of assessments at the Vancouver Island office.

Why the slow pace in Victoria?

Quick wit, simple lives or Victoria's traditional sleepy pace might explain it, but Muller thinks the federal government's massive $1.2 million advertising campaign simply paid off in this city.

"People generally are saying they're not having any problems with the new tax reform," Muller said.

Still, the Victoria office has handled nearly 65,000 inquiries since Jan. 1. Those include calls on five toll-free up-Island telephone lines, nine local phone lines and direct inquiries at the office.

Five wickets have been working full-time giving information and help at the Victoria office and most inquiries come from older, retired people.

Many of Victoria's large retired population are freed from filing tax returns this year because their basic deduction has been increased to $2,600.

But it hasn't meant a decrease in the number of filers at the Victoria office because 7,000 local armed forces personnel are included on regular tax roles for the first time this year.

Muller doesn't know how many Victorians still haven't filed tax returns, but by last Wednesday 3 million Canadians were still dodging the inevitable.

Monday's deadline isn't as ominous as it seems, however. It's a one-way street to the tax office and if the government owes you money, it doesn't care when your file your tax return.

The majority of Canada's 10 million taxpayers do not owe the government money, so the majority of Canadians could conceivably not file their tax returns on time.

In fact in 1970, only 12.8 per cent of Canadians had taxes to pay in April.

It's tricky business, though, because if your math is wrong and you really owe the government money, your tardiness will cost you five per cent of your unpaid taxes.

The main tax problems brought to the Victoria office have concerned unemployment insurance overpayments, taxes levied on dividends from Canadian corporations and the new tax on capital gains.

Fisheries Criticize Easy Jobless Pay

By TOM McDOUGALL

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Unemployment insurance is too easy to get and its hurting the fishing industry, says the Fisheries Council of Canada.

The council passed a resolution Friday asking the federal government to undertake a thorough review of unemployment insurance as it applies to the fishing industry, and, "as a matter of urgency consideration" to consider putting the fishermen's benefit periods on a regional basis.

The resolution said that "many processing plants are having great difficulty in obtaining and keeping satisfactory staff because of the easy availability of unemployment benefits."

Council spokesmen say there is no chance of unemployment benefits being repealed completely.

But, said council manager C. Gordon O'Brien, "there is a real need for review of it. We have many instances where people won't work in the plants because they are better off with unemployment insurance."

He said some regional consideration is especially needed in the cutoff dates which the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) enforces for fishermen.

Currently, fishermen can collect UIC benefits only in the period between Dec. 15 and April 15 each year. This is satisfactory in most provinces, Mr. O'Brien said, because there is little fishing in these months. But in Newfoundland some of the year's best fishing is in the winter.

In other resolutions the council asked the federal government to:

—Establish a surveillance program using Canadian Forces aircraft and ships and fisheries patrol vessels to monitor the activities of other nations fishing off Canada's continental shelf in the area where international quotas are in effect;

—Prohibit foreign fishing and fishery supply vessels from using East Coast ports except in emergencies or by special agreement,

—Begin work on the planned environmental study of the Gulf of St. Lawrence "without further delay"

The council expressed concern over declining herring and groundfish landings in the Atlantic provinces and asked the government to expand its research programs so that quotas and other control measures can be based on sound scientific knowledge.

It also wants the European Common Market to eliminate its tariffs on imported salmon and halibut. The United Kingdom buys 56 per cent of Canada's salmon exports and is a leading buyer of frozen salmon and halibut. Britain's entry into the Common Market will mean an eventual tarrif of 13 per cent on canned salmon and eight per cent on frozen salmon and halibut.

The council suggests Canada proceed on its own with a proposed $14-million salmon enhancement program in the Fraser River system.

The program would be financed jointly by nations participating jointly in the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission, all of whom would share equally in the increased catches.

But most fishing industry organizations in British Columbia have advocated that the program be carried out solely by the Canadian government.

A separate resolution urged the government to give top priority to providing funds for a comprehensive program of salmon stream development throughout British Columbia.

It wants to exempt fishing vessels from complying with international regulations for prevention of collisions at sea. The council maintained that fishing vessels would be hampered in their operations, if they were forced to observe shipping lanes.

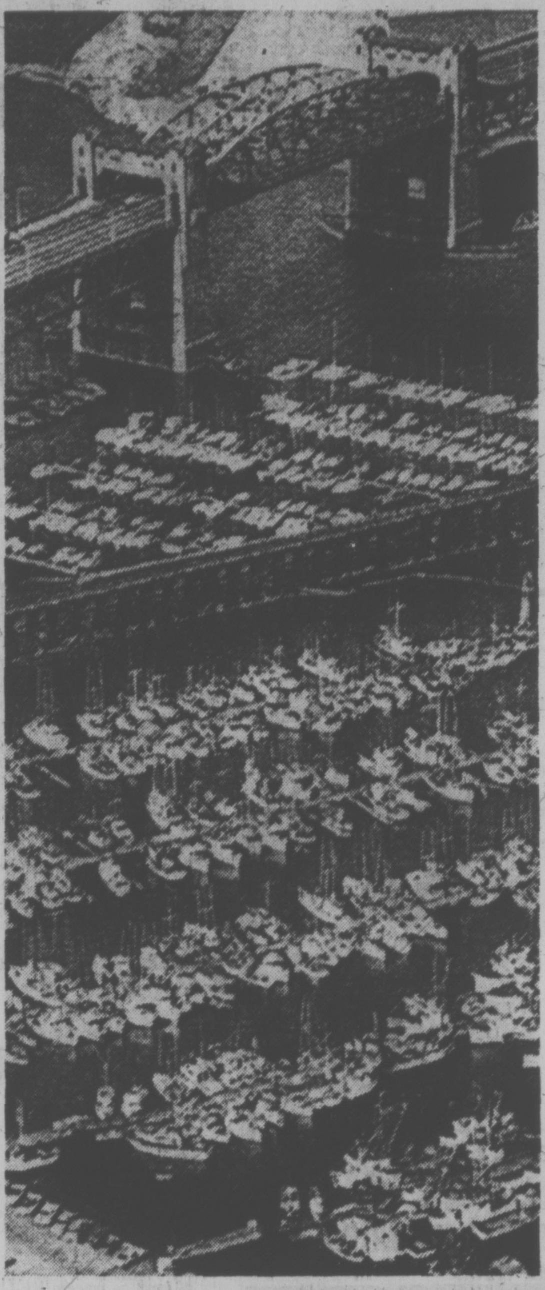
Complaint Won't Stop Log Drive

VANCOUVER (CP) — Weldwood of Canada Ltd. will go ahead with a log drive down the Quesnel and Cariboo rivers early next month, despite complaints from a provincial biologist stationed at Williams Lake.

The biologist, Jack Leggett of the fish and wildlife branch, has said the cumulative effect of such drives over the years destroys river systems, and this year's drive is especially worrisome because of low water levels.

Leggett said both rivers have salmon spawning beds, and up to 2,500 tons of bark could be deposited in the river because of the drive. He urged hauling the logs by truck.

Weldwood officials have said they have long-range plans to put in a road to connect with existing logging routes. The 430,000-log drive is to start about May 7, and a spokesman said Friday the water level will be taken into consideration.



NAUTICAL JAM near Vancouver's Burrard Bridge is result of shortage of mooring space but crowded jetties may be eased somewhat this fall with new marina just down from the present one on city's False Creek.

Crime Probe Witness' Parole Questioned

OTTAWA (CP) — Theodore Aboud, a key witness at the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime, received an early parole late in 1972.

The parole of the 53-year-old Aboud, who was sentenced to 10 years for fraud in November, 1970, was confirmed by officials here. But no details were released.

"It is not in the public interest to disclose this thing," said a spokesman for the national parole board Friday in refusing to give more details of Aboud's Dec. 1, 1972, "parole by exception."

He even refused to disclose the name of the prison where Aboud was held. He simply confirmed that he was in prison, contrary to a Montreal report.

Meanwhile, in Montreal officials connected with the provincial inquiry said they had no knowledge of an early parole. Said inquiry lawyer Robert Cooper: "As far as I know, in the inquiry, no attempt was made by us to get him any favors, we never asked to get him paroled.

"I know that from everything I've been told that guy certainly was in jail."

Chief investigator Andre Deluca of the special squad investigating organized crime said the squad was put in contact with Aboud after he was sentenced. They listened to him and decided to bring him before the inquiry.

A spokesman for the penitentiaries service said there is no record that the 53-yar-old man who has admitted many crimes before Quebec investigators was in any federal institution. Normally a 10-year sentence would be served in a federal prison.

The parole board spokesman did say the parole board was not aware of any plans for Aboud to appear before any Quebec crime probe at the time the parole was granted.

The spokesman was commenting on a Montreal Star report that Aboud had not served any part of his sentence. The newspaper said the man and perhaps his family has been kept in a motel outside Montreal since November, 1970.

Those wonderful Jaeger sweaters and skirts . . .

We keep running into people who . . . for one reason or another . . . can't wear wool sweaters . . . Often it's because they're allergic to wool . . . or just find it too warm . . . Anyway, for them . . . and for the rest of us who'd like a lightweight pullover which we can just toss into the washer . . . Wilson's have included several styles of acrylic Courtelle sweaters in their Jaeger shipment this spring . . . There's one in a narrow rib, with high turtle neck . . . navy, red, yellow or white . . . Another with lower turtle neck and back gip in navy or oyster . . . and a mock turtle neck in turquoise only . . . Also a smart navy and white with crew neck, and another turtle neck with navy/green/white stripes . . . All of these acrylics are priced at $22 . . . Wool pullovers in a blend of camel hair, cashmere and lambs wool come in either blond or dark camel color . . . One is a classic turtle neck, the other has a V-neck with cable stitching down the front . . . Smart camel hair skirts in two different styles are exact matches for these sweaters . . . while front-pleated lightweight tweed skirts tone in very well too . . . There are wool knit Jaeger slacks, noted for their good fit . . . They're straight cut and come up well at the waist . . . Black, navy and oyster . . . $40 . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Smart male attire for the new season . . .

We feel we're getting to be a bit of an authority on what the young man . . . who aspires to be a sharp dresser . . . should wear! . . . All due, of course, to our frequent visits to the Ram Shack . . . where not only is a fantastic selection of smart, masculine attire to be found . . . but they also tell you how things should be co-ordinated . . . what to wear with what, and how! . . . The new spring slacks are a colorful lot . . . patterned or plain . . . Checks both large and small, seersuckers, plaids . . . very big for spring! New jackets to wear with them . . . both fortrels and very lightweight wools . . . We saw lots of smart leather jackets, in sports jacket and conventional styles . . . designed in Europe and made of the softest leather imaginable . . . One belt to hold one's pants up is not enough nowadays . . . Belts should be co-ordinated to pick up one of the colors in the slacks . . . So Ram Shack has them in all colors . . . Seersuckers are the latest in ties . . . Mighty sharp, too! They come in a fabulous color range . . . The short sleeve sweater look is very much the thing for casual wear . . . Ram Shack's sweaters are loosely knit cotton and acrylic boucle, with either placket or zip front . . . Short sleeved Fortrel sweaters with crew neck, in various solid colors . . . are the perfect co-ordinates to wear with all the colorful baggies for summer . . . and there are all sorts of dress shirts with short sleeves, at . . . Ram Shack, University Hgts. Young London designers are turning out grownup, polished, pulled-together clothes with a feeling of elegance and even glamour.

Light when you need it . . .

Some lamps are meant for lighting effect . . . others are ornamental . . . and still others must be functional and pull their own weight, so to speak . . . We saw the perfect exemplification of this latter at the Lighthouse the other day . . . Called simply the "working lamp" . . . it comes from Denmark . . . has the typical good Scandinavian streamlining . . . with clamp base and two arms which can be moved in all directions . . . as can the lamp itself . . . giving a tremendous light for reading, sewing, or any other activity where really good illumination is called for . . . You can clamp it on a shelf, table, desk, bed headboard, chair arm, work bench . . . or take it out of the clamp and set it into a wall bracket, also obtainable at the Lighthouse . . . This working lamp really lives up to its name! . . . Comes in red, white, yellow, blue, black and olive green metal to blend into the color scheme of any room . . . Price is only $21! . . . We'd say it's worth its weight in gold . . . and no home should be without one! . . . And now, switching from lamps to handbags . . . we saw some very smart leather shoulder bags . . . made of sturdy cowhide in natural colors . . . They're in different shapes and sizes . . . very sporty-looking and particularly nice with pantsuits and casual clothes . . . Prices start at $21.95 . . . which you can consider in the nature of an investment because such a bag should wear practically forever! . . . The Lighthouse, 1005 Broad St., 383-6633.

Where wishes can come true . . .

Showers are the order of the day at the Wooden Spoon . . . and we don't mean the kind of showers that bring May flowers . . . but rather those to warm the cockles of the heart of any bride-to-be! . . . If you're planning a kitchen shower . . . simply collect money from the guests and take it to the Wooden Spoon . . . They'll help you select the right gifts . . . or do the whole thing for you, including free gift wrapping! . . . We think this is a terrific service . . . and we promise your shower will be a memorable one on all counts! . . . Next thing we want to tell you about the Wooden Spoon is that they now have a permanent "Wish Book" . . . divided into three sections: Wedding Gifts . . . Show Gifts . . . Wife/Mother/Cook . . . The idea is that a person can wander around the shop and have all the things she'd like listed in the Wish Book . . . Then relatives and friends need only drop in and scan the page where these "wishes" are listed . . . Great, not only for wedding and shower gifts, but for Christmas and birthdays or any other time when a gift is in order . . . Common Mart or Not . . .

LONDON (UPI) — Is the British male about to be shoved into second place in competition for damsels of his own fair isle by suave continental lovers? Not likely, according to initial reactions to such a prediction voiced this week.

Most British women and newspapers seemed to agree that while bottom-pinching and flowery language may be great for Euro-lovers, the custom goes over like a lead balloon in England.

Don Juan Collican, a reporter for the London Daily Mirror, tested the theory on a girl he saw in a restaurant.

"My flower," he purred. "You have all the freshness of spring. May I get you another coffee?"

"Get lost," she replied, "or I'll call the manager."

He received a similar reception when he flagged down a cab for a young lady, then bowed and kissed her hand as she entered it.

"She didn't say a word and vanished in her taxi," he reported.

An opinion poll conducted by the London Evening standard indicated most British women felt Collican got exactly what he deserved. Or as Marianne Knight, a 21-year-old Chelsea secretary, put it:

"We certainly don't want bottom-pinching here."

The reason? "British men are fantastic, much better than continentals, who are too false and lay on the compliments too thick," said 20-year-old Chris Peters.

Cream of Shrimp Good Home Soup

By MARY MOORE

This idea comes from a reader and it turned out to be so popular I want to give it full exposure in a column all by itself.

The letter goes: "We have used your Egg and Shrimp Casserole many times and have enjoyed it so much. Now we find we cannot purchase the frozen Shrimp Soup. Would you know where we could get this? If not, what we can use as a substitute? Margaret K."

So I want to work and made:

CREAM OF SHRIMP SOUP
(condensed and ready-to-serve)

¼ c. margarine
2 tsp. finely chopped onion
¼ c. margarine
2 tsp. finely chopped onion
¼ c. flour
1 tbsp. chicken bouillon cordial
1 c. 10 per cent cream ("half and half")
1 c. mild
one 4¼-oz. can small shrimp and liquid
2 tbsp. sherry
1 c. milk

Into the top part of the double boiler measure the margarine and onion and over direct heat blend and stir for a minute or two then blend in flour. Now stir in chicken bouillon cordial, cream and milk until thick. Add shrimp and their liquid. Transfer to over bottom of double boiler and cook covered for 5 or 10 minutes (or hold over boiling water until serving time.) Add sherry.

The soup is now a condensed soup and can be used for the Egg and Shrimp Casserole to which Margaret K. refers.

To make the soup ready-to-serve add one more cup of milk, heat through. Ladle into cream soup cups and sprinkle with little mounds of finely chopped parsley at centre.

"A Business Built on Customer Confidence and Goodwill"

GAS POWERED car built for his 12-year-old son Scott gets once-over from William Chambers of Fort Erie. Scott, who suffers from muscular dystrophy, is enabled to enjoy a feeling of freedom and independence other children take for granted. Car is powered by lawn mower engine and is controlled entirely by hand levers.

dear abby

'Spy' Not Forgiven

DEAR ABBY: Quite by accident I saw my husband's car parked in a strange place when he was supposed to be out of town on business. I hid and waited for him to return, and several hours later a young girl drove up with Bob in the car. He kissed her goodbye hurriedly, got into his own car, and drove off. I followed the girl home, rang her doorbell and told her who I was. She was shocked because she didn't know Bob was married. (She 22, Bob is 41.)

I then drove home, and Bob acted glad to see me. He lied about the "business trip" and after giving him enough rope to hang himself, I told him what I had done. He was furious with me for "spying" on him, then he stormed out of the house. I immediately called his mother and told her the whole story. She very nonchalantly said: "What do you want me to do, spank a 41-year-old man?"

Bob moved his clothes out of the house and refuses to have anything to do with me. We have three children who need a father. I've begged him to forgive me, but he's still angry. Abby, why should I beg him to forgive me? He should be begging me to forgive him. How can I get him back?—Red Eyes.

DEAR RED: You may not be able to. Moral: A woman will forgive an unfaithful husband faster than a man will forgive an emasculating wife.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl, recently graduated from high school, and now I have a steady job that pays well.

I recently moved out of my parents' home to assume full responsibility for myself and my life.

My problem is this: I am constantly approached by adults who ask me why I left my parents' home. When I reply: "Because my parents have done so much for me that I decided it was time I did something for them," they look at me like I'm crazy.

Abby, that's the way I feel. I think the best way for children to repay their parents for all they have done is to become self-supporting and self-sufficient as soon as possible, and relieve parents of the responsibility.

In this day and age people are so used to condemning the yough for doing something wrong, they condemn them even when they do something right. Or am I wrong? — Independent.

DEAR INDEPENDENT: Not every 18-year-old chick is able to leave the nest and become self-sufficient and self-supporting, but those who are deserve congratulations not criticism.

DEAR ABBY: To the correspondent who said wedding presents were out of style — that they just passed the tray and collected money instead:

Last summer we attended a wedding where the festive dinner was prepared by friends who were members of a gourmet cooking club. Their "gift" was preparing the dinner. Another friend donated his services by painting two rooms in the old house where the bride and groom were going to live.

Soliciting gifts of money would be considered bad form in our circles, and we are by no means the idle rich. Imaginative gifts suitable to the circumstances rate tops. — Bill.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, April 29
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on added independence, more freedom, a chance to display unique talents and abilities. Cycle is high — your timing is sharp. Come out of any emotional shell. Many now want to see what you can do — and they want to see you.

TAURUS (April 20- May 20: Old stories could be dredged up — perceive difference between rumor and factual information. Individual born under Leo might throw light on what was a mystery. Remember obligation to one confined to home, hospital.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphanis is on wish fulfillment. You may be in position to get what you want — but you may not ask for what you need. Mature approach is required to solve dilemma. Hunch pays off — intuitive intellect now is sharply honed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Aim high; goal is within reach. Know it and proceed accordingly. Be flexible. Broaden horizons. Shake off apparent limitations. You will be going places and doing things. Sagittarian could be involved. Socialize.

LEO (July 23--Aug. 22): Long-range is necessary. If you insist on bits and pieces, you come up with puzzle. If horizons are broadened, you get complete picture. The choice is your own. Aquarius, Scorpio individuals play prominent roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dig beneath surface indications. If analytical, you find answers and save money. Key is to make concession to mate, partner. Changes due. Go with tide. Trying to block progress would be an error. Act accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study contracts, agreements and take steps to improve public relations. One who opposes you is willing to admit past mistakes. You gain through diplomacy. Means be a gracious winner. Don't force issues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov 21): Maintain low profile. Obtain hint from Libra message. Defer to mate, partner. See situation as it exists, not through rose-colored glasses. Get sufficient rest. Check diet. One who performs special service needs encouragement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is a time for power play. Creative forces surge. You get what you go after — especially where opposite sex enters picture. Personal magnetism is highlighted. Public responds to your efforts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Finish rather than initiate project. Build on solid base. Check safety hazards at home base. Deal with one born under Aries. Situation that has been "hanging on" reaches stage of final settlement.

AQUARIUS (Jan.-Feb. 18): Strike creativt chord. Remove barrier to accomplishment. Take chance on abilities, ideas. Relatives may seem to interfere. Maintain balance and sense of humor. Leo could be much in picture. Experiment!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent is on income, money situation in general, ability to collect what is needed. Intuitive intellect is featured. Means your judgment, hunch about finances plays key role. Take overall view with basic security in mind.

Forecast for Monday, April 30

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get ready for the "end and the beginning." You are on the precipice of opportunity. But some agreements, partnerships, relationships are prcarious. Keep guard up — take only calculated risks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Moderate pace. Avoid extremes. Don't ask for too much, too soon. Aquarian could be featured. One who requests favor can do a great service in return. Know it and respond accordingly. You will get something for something.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Social activity accelerates. You do more things have more opportunities in the wings. Friends who have disputes could attempt to involve you. Maintain neutral stance. Otherwise, you could be "fall guy."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Speak frankly. If honest, you gain. What appears an obntacle could actually be a healthy challenge. One you regard as holding opposite view may actually become your close ally. Roll with the tide. Circumstances favor ultimate achievement.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Review plans, esptcially those which involve travel. Check stops, reservations and accommodations. Messages could be garbled. Be sure your needs are understood and that you are being quoted correctly. Time now saves inconvenience, money.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diplomacy is required in money discussion with mate, close associate. Intelligent concession should be order of day. Make peace at home. Smoldering family dispute should be eradicated. Don't compound original error.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unorthodox procedures will best serve your purpose. Take course which rids you of unnecessary burdens. Create your own traditions. Means don't feel wedded to what others think or do. Be your own person — hear your own voice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Heavier workload indicated. Nothing is apt to come easy but efforts will prove fruitful. Older individual displays confidence. Prestige rises as result. Offer could come which is hard to refuse. Be firm where terms are concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You receive attention from worthwhile sources. More persons are interested in what you plan and do. Aries could play prominent role. Friend who advocated direct action is working in your behalf. Respond accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Strike independent stance — let others know that you want and odds are that you will get what is needed. One in authority is willing to change procedures in manner favorable to you. Know it and deal from position of strength.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid writing letters while angry. Measure words, deeds. Some around you would be pleased if you make a slip based on impulse. Be mature. Rise above the petty. One who taught you in past is available for consultation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check tendency to spread efforts too thin. Finish what you start. Refuse to be tempted into concept that grass must be greener elsewhere. You have plenty that is of value. No need to sell yourself short.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have fine sense of humor — and a tendency to put on weight. You are artistic, have great curiosity about the world and will probably do your share of traveling. August could by your most important month of 1973. You are finishing a cycle, completing lessons.

Are you interested in learning what may be a novel type of handicraft for you? Experimenting with tie-dying is not only intriguing, it also enables you to create some unique fabric patterns.

A six-page leaflet explains that the basic idea of the ancient art of tie-dying is to tie off sections of a fabric and immerse it in a dye. The tied-off parts will not absorb the dye so that a non-tinted pattern develops on a dyed background.

The leaflet lists the materials needed for tie-dying and describes the simple procedures to follow. It also points out that nearly all fabrics lend themselves to tie-dying, except glass and mineral fibres, some polysters and acrylics.

Illustrations show how to tie-dye and the various knots that can be used to achieve different effects. Any fabric that can be washed by machine can also be dyed by machine. Simply follow the same fabric care directions as for washing.

Immediately after you have used your machine for dying, run it through a complete wash cycle with hot water, the usual amount of detergent and ¼ cup of bleach.

The Way To Tie-Dye is obtainable from consumer service department, Canada Starch Company Limited, P.O. Box 129, Montreal, Quebec. Please allow at least three to four weeks for delivery.

Jubilee Boasts Butcher family

Brown working in hospital shop

By LON WOOD
Times Staff

Jack Brown is a hospital sawbones — but not in the medical sense.

But he doesn't haggle with housewives out to get the pick of the pot roast — in fact, he doesn't even know the price of the 210 lbs. of roast beef, 350 lbs. of pork, 470 lbs. of lamb, 475 lbs. of veal, 200 lbs. of bacon, 525 lbs. of hamburger and other assorted weights of fish, poultry and sausage he prepares for the cooks.

"I don't know the price but I keep track of the quality of what comes in here — the consistent quality, too. And if it's not what I expect, I send it back immediately.

The wiry, white-haired Brown is a native of Suffolk, England. He came to Canada 40 years ago after serving a five-year apprenticeship in the old country.

"My first job after my apprenticeship was 18 pence (about 60 cents) a week," he said Friday in an interview at the hospital.

Brown joined the Jubilee in 1945, left in 1949 to work in a private shop but returned for good to the hospital after an experience with the shop owner.

"I was told in this particular place to camouflage the product — to undercut meat," he said.

"One day a little old lady came in and asked for pork tenderloin — we didn't have any.

"On the front quarter of beef — underneath the blade — there's a cut called Virginia steak. I was told to cut that and sell it as tenderloin at $1.50 a pound — the underpiece was then only 50 cents a pound. I quit on the spot and never went back to a private shop."

Brown says his biggest boss now is the hospital menu.

"The dietitians come down each Wednesday to go over the coming week's meals," he said. "I tell them the amount of meat I'll require for the week — so many front quarters, so many hind quarters. Then I work a day ahead of the cooks — BONING ALL THE CUTS."

Latest statistics on how many meals are cooked daily at the Jubilee is 2,900 per day for 1972.

Fish is served on occasion, though Jack no longer has to prepare fish up to 85 lbs. from scratch — fillets are brought in.

He has one main bit of advice for home cooks:

"Don't overlook Grade B meats — that's all we use at the Jubilee because it is leanest and we have so many on low and no fat diets. You save pennies on it too — but they add up."

"My advice to every housewife and cook would be to buy Grade B. Take a Grade A rump foast — only one out of four in a family may eat the fat, which is paid for by weight, and thrown out. The buyer seems to like the marble effect of fat — even a butcher rolls a lean red roast in fat. For some reason, people don't seem to like the look of red lean meat — and they're paying for it."

With the exception of some frozen lamb and poultry, all meat used by the hospital is fresh.

"Personally, I would pay no attention to someone who says hospital food isn't the best," said Brown. "Of course I understand the person usually isn't well . . ."

The butcher, who will retire in November when he turns 65, doesn't have much regard for meat boycotts either.

"They won't do any good — except maybe for a week or so. I'd rather take another shirt off my back than cut my eats."

Brown said as far as he knows there are no other hospitals in Canada operating their own butcher shops — pre-packaging having taken over in most cases.

When he retires he will make a visit to England before returning to his Oak Bay home to pursue his hobby of raising and showing canaries — a pastime which takes him often to shows in Vancouver, Seattle and Portland.

Saturday Clothes Crack Barrier

TORONTO (CP) — "The suit is really outmoded," said Jack Haber, editor of Gentleman's Qarterly, but it will not disappear from men's wardrobes for at least 25 years.

"Most men can't even get away with wearing what you call Saturday clothes to work, though the barriers are beginning to break," said the editor of the consumer-oriented men's fashion magaine published in the United Sates.

He said the barriers will crumble over the "next decade or so" mostly because men who've become adults since the Second World War "are a little more willing to try things; they have a positive attitude."

"Just look at this suit," he told 250 retailers at a conference here.

"I could have worn this identical outfit in 1933. Basically the suit is the same model Abraham Lincoln wore — a sack coat and matching trousers.

"Sure, once every few years we widen the pants or make them narrow, but that's all. Look at the Nehru coat. It was great but it was badly mismanagevd. Men were so fearful; so unsure. And all we did was take the lapels off. It'll be back, maybe about 1980."

In the next decade men will find themselves developing two personalities where dress is concerned with two wardrobes for the office and leisure time, he said.

He's against best-dressed lists — "I think they're insane" — and against people figuring they can learn how to dress by slavishly following the dictates of fashion magazines.

"You can learn how to dress," he said. "The instinct for it is in you somewhere."

He also advises men to pick the brains of their well-dressed friends.

He admits his all-time favorite garment is a navy blazer "because it's the most useful thing you can have in your wardrobe. It can be dressy or casual."

Plaid suits "are a niche above dull, dreary suits" said Mr. Haber and he is fond of grey flannel "slightly nipped, with wider lapels and a flared bottom, because everybody needs an unpatterned suit."

He won't reject an idea because it was once considered feminine.

"If a man's face gets dry and flaky in the winter of course he can use a night cream. Granted, it's what his wife does, but if he has a skin problem why should he walk around with a mangled-up face?

"It's like handbags. There's nothing more functional than a shoulder bag . . . For sheer practicality they caf't deny the sense they make."

Dr. Joyce Brothers, New York psychologist and television personality, said a man chooses his clothes today to convey something about himself to others and to bolster an idea he has of himself.

"Men seem almost unique in their ability to look at themselves in a mirror and see a self concept," she said.

"Women, on the other hand, look in a mirror and see truth."

A young man wearing a contemporary suit played against the solid colored shirt is conveying a message, she said.

"He's trying to say he's older and more mature than he really is and wants to be thought of as good stable executive material.

"Leisure has become an art and with it has come a tendency to showing more conspicuous consumption. The older man selecting a co-ordinated casual outfit is confident enough to wear it on Friday to show he's getting away for the weekend and that he has the money to do so."

'Deprived' San Marcos Children

By DAVID COHEN

LONDON (FWF) — Since Freud, we have believed that what happens to a child in its first few years is crucial for later development. The Jesuits used to boast that if they had a child for the first seven years, he was theirs for life.

Psychological research has reduced the Jesuits' seven years to three or four. Psychologists said if a child had a "rich" environment that stimulated, he would flourish intellectually. The ideal parents did not have to have the money to buy their children all the toys desired, bvut they had to give objects to play with, sounds to listen to, things to see. They had to talk to them a lot.

Classic Role

In the recent British debate on nursery education for children under five, many people have argued that it would be terrible to deprive children of their mother's attention — even for half the day. For, classically, it is the mother who gies the child most of his vital stimulation. But now a distinguished psychologist at Harvard University, Jerome Kagan, has challenged this idea that children's characters are determined by what happens to them before they are four or five.

Kagan has been studying children in a very isolated village called San Marcos in Guatemala. In San Marcos, no-one seems to have bothered much with Freudian or Jesuit theories. Kagan discovered that infants usually spent the first year of their lives totally inside their parents' small, dark huts. The huts were tiny. The parents did not neglect the children in the sense that they did not feed or clean them but they did not regard the children as being in any need of stimulation. They took little notice of them.

Tests Given

In the West, children are usually given tremendous encouragement during their first few years. We coo when they smile: we praise them when they start to speak. None of this happens in San Marcos.

And psychologial tests, carried out on the children when they were three years old, showed them to be much inferior to middle-class North American children on a whole range of perceptual and intellectual talks. They were passive, fearful and quite incredibly quiet for children. That, Kagan said, was the most weird and eerie fact for our children bubble with energy. They are ferocious engines parents try to restrain.

Psychologists would have predicted that these children could never recover from these early disadvantages. The surprise came when Kagan revisied the village when the children were about 10 to 11 years old. He expected to find retarded or, at least, lifeless children. They turned out to be remarkably competent. Not only were they able to cope well with their own environment but they actually out-performed North American middle-class children on a whole series of tests. These tests included ones of memory and inference. Both verbally and visually, these apparently "deprived" children showed none of the effects of their deprivation.

In the United States there has been a lot of disappointment about the failure of programs of remedial education such as Head Start. Head Start programs try to compensate for the early poor and unstimulating environment of many black children by cramming them, after they are four, with stimulation. Many critics have pointed out that this does not work.

Kagan believes that the reason that many of the San Marcos children "caught up" with "normal" children was that they were left perfectly free to develop as they pleased. The San Marcos child is not labelled. He is neither inferior nor superior: he is given a lot of freedom to explore if he wants to. He is not, as many black U.S children are made to feel, put down as someone who is inferior and has, somehow, to make it up to the requisite "white" grade.

These sort of pressures can be insidious and seem able to block mental development. In their absence, Kagan argues, the child's brain is remarkably plastic — much more plastic than we have been willing to allow.

It is very much a message of hope for if education can learn to apply some of the lessons this research teaches, it will be much better able to help children develp their potential than at present.

Hospital Studies Indicate Pill Can Lead to Strokes

BOSTON (AP) — A two-year study by 12 teaching hospitals in the United States strongly indicates that using oral contraceptives may lead to strokes in women of child-bearing age.

The study, published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine, was co-ordinated by Duke University Medical Centre.

While there has been previous evidence connecting strokes and the use of oral contraceptives, the new study offers the most conclusive data on the risk to date.

The study concludes that women using birth-control pills are almost 10 times more likely to suffer cerebral thrombosis than those who do not. This thrombosis is a stroke caused by an artery in the brain being blocked.

Another increased stroke risk found in the study was that of cerebral hemorrhage, the rupture of a blood vessel in the brain. This was found to be twice as great in pill users, although the researchers noted that some thrombosis may have been mistakenly identified as hemmorrhage stroke.

The study of almost 1,300 women also noted that there was a disturbingly high association between smoking and stroke in women using the pill.

The researchers suggested that smoking adds to the contraceptive's possible blood-clotting tendencies.

"It should be emphasized, however, that even in non-smokers the use of oral contraceptition increased the risk of stroke," the researchers added.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Martin Vessey, a British authority on birth control pills, said the risks of pill-associated strokes must be put into perspective.

Vessey contends that the risks from pill side effects are smaller than those from normal pregnancy or abortion.

Other researchers sharply disagree and say the risks from possible strokes from pill use should get greater emphasis.

Radio Distorts English

LONDON (UPI) — Schools are having trouble teaching proper English to some English children.

The reason, Mrs. Rosemary Driscoll said this week, is the transistor radio.

Mrs. Driscoll, a London teacher, told a professional teachers' association that youngsters who carry transistor radios and use words and sentences picked up from disc jockeys are not learning to speak correctly.

She said "dee-jay-ese" even infiltrates into prayer time.

"I recently asked my children at school if they would like to pray for anybody who was ill," she said. "One little boy asked if we could have a mensh (mention) for Aunty Dora who fell down the stairs and broke her leg.

"Questions are always being popped and its congrats for the winner and better luck next time for those bringing up the Ree-har (rear)."

The conference supported Mrs. Driscoll's motion to look into the effect of the mass media, especially pop music stations on the development of written and spoken English for children.

'Can Curb Pill Effects'

LONDON (UPI) — A team of doctors says they believe they have found a cure for the depression and loss of sexual appetite that troubles some women taking birth control pills.

A team from St. Mary's Hospital reported in the medical journal Lancet that they found a deficiency of Vitamin B6 in one-half the women in a group that reported suffering these symptoms while taking the pill. Giving them extra vitamin B6, the doctors said, ended the trouble.

Dehumanizing Planning Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Treating family planning as a health problem that needs only to make enough services available to people is a dehumanizing approach, Raymond Doyle of Ottaws said Thursday.

Doyle is a social worker who is interested in Serena Ltd. His wife, Marie-Paule Doyle, is executive director of Serena.

Serena is a Roman Catholic organization that trains couples to teach its birth control approach based on charting individual fertility periods.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle were part of a panel held here to discuss Serena and family planning at the Catholic Hospital Association of Canda convention. The convention ended this week.

Doyle maintains the current approach to family planning has been dominated by a few small groups, including drug companies, doctors and feminists, with strong support from the media.

He said unwanted pregnancy is regarded as an illness to prevent or cure, and the doctors' offices become treatment centres.

He said services are organized in such a way that providers see family planning only as part of the problems of poverty, or urban blight and to be provided largely for the poor and for minority ethnic groups.

"Curing people of having too many children does not automatically provide them with larger incomes or better cities."

Mrs. Doyle said family planning is not a health problem, but a global human problem. She said couples should establish their own priorities in terms of how many children to have and when to have them.

The Doyles and fellow panelists Raymond and Marielle Lapointe presented Serena as a natural method that provides an alternative to artificial means of contraception.

Mrs. Lapointe said Serena is attracting some Protestant couples because it is an approach based on natural functions and because it is in step with the current interest in sexuality.

She said, "We are not born lovers, we have to learn how to relax and respond."

Mrs. Lapointe, who is a physician, said she questions whether medical students learn enough about birth control and the physiology of sex.

Malformation Fear Spurs Abortion Guilt

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — A Missoula woman, who claims that her unborn child may be malformed, has filed suit in U.S. District Court in an attempt to prevent the state from enforcing its law prohibiting abortions.

The complaint identifies the plaintiff only as Mary Doe and says that she is about six weeks pregnant and that she received x-ray treatments prior to knowing she was pregnant.

Earlier this month a state district court judge dismissed a complaint filed in Billings by a woman who wanted an abortion and who asked that Montana's abortion law be held unconstitutional.

But in dismissing that complaint, the judge said he believes the state law, which prohibits abortions except to save the mother's life, violates the U.S. Constitution.

The latest complaint was brought as a class-action suit by Mary Doe on behalf of herself and "all other persons similarly situated." It names Montana Attorney-General Robert Woodahl and Missoula County Attorney Robert Deschamps as defendants.

The woman, married and the mother of a healthy eight-month-old boy, says she has a spinal ailment which causes extreme pain during pregnancy and which requires treatment with drugs that are potentially harmful to fetal development. She also claims the x-ray treatments she has received may have damaged the fetus.

The complaint says she requested her physician to perform an abortion and was told that he could not comply in view of a legal opinion written earlier this year by Woodahl.

In that opinion, Woodahl held that Montana's abortion law remains in full force until overturned by the courts. Woodahl's ruling came in the wake of the U.S. Supreme court decision that held a similar law in Texas was unconstitutional.

State District Court Judge L. C. Gulbrandson, who had jurisdiction over the unsuccessful suit filed in Billings, suggested that the state legislature enact an abortion law at its earliest opportunity to comply with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

The high court's opinion said states cannot interfere with abortions during the first three months of pregnancy and can interfere during the second three months only to regulate the medical safety of such procedures.

In the Billings case, Gulbrandson said testimony indicated that the woman was beyond six months of pregnancy and that he, therefore, was prevented in her case from ruling formally on the question of the constitutionality of Montana's law.

He said, however, that if he had been forced to rule, he would have felt constrained to hold the state law is unconstitutional.

Stehelin was called when the artist was stricken by a heart attack April 8, but the physician was ill and unable to leave his home. A doctor from Mougins went to the Picasso home but the artist was already dead.

Door Knobs to Doilies Catch Sale Fanatics

LONDON (FWF) — A diving helmet made of copper and brass in the 1890s was one of the first items to be eagerly snapped up at the recent International Antiques' Fair held at the Earls Court exhibition centre in London.

The purchaser, a U.S. dealer who paid £155 ($375) for the piece, claimed it was "just the thing to decorate a Cape Cod-style dining room." He then went on to inspect a series of "antique" brass cash registers priced at from £30 to £70 each ($70-$150) on behalf of a client whose special interest is early 20th century commerce.

Such sales set the "anything goes" mood of the sector of the fair devoted to Victorian, Edwardian and Art Deco items.

The original owner of the starched, white, 19th-century night shirt shown in this part of the fair would surely have been astonished — not only to see such intimate attire on public display, but also to find his garment now priced at £40 ($95). On the same stand, brass door knobs, bundled in dozens, found a ready sale, as did embroidered cake doilies.

CHAIRS HOT ITEMS

Chairs, originally made for Scottish lairds from the antlers of stags shot on their estates, composed another line which sold like the proverbial hot cakes at the fair — again usually to buyers from the U.S.

Elsewhere in the fair, a gigantic gilded four-poster bed with tasselled satin coverlets vied for attention with a plum-tinted vintage Rolls Royce car. More modestly sized, but proportionately almost as expensive, were dolls' house fittings of the 1920s and 1930s. A tiny tea set on a tray, on the back of which could still faintly be discerned the original price of one shilling and sixpense, fetched £10.

The aim of the fair, the first of its type to be held in Britain, was to attract both buyers and sellers from the European economic community nations to London.

Among the European-origin genuine antiques — items made before 1830 — it was the tapestries and icons which commanded most attention from visitors.

Stands showing Chinese and Indian objets d'art were, however, well patronized, and a seller of sitars found that the pop music craze for these instruments had pushed prices to record levels among serious collectors also.

FOLKLORE FASCINATION

Meanwhile, at the 36th Chelsea Antiques' Fair, held at the nearby Chelsea Town Hall, buyers interested in British folklore objects were having a field day. Treen was the big talking point of this fair and exhibits for sale included a selection of Welsh lovespoons.

These tokens, made by a boy as a love-offering to his sweetheart, are intricate ornaments rather than functional feeding equipment. The more complex the work, the greater the affection of the donor was the tradition which resulted in patterns like mobile balls carved in the central shaft of the spoon and chain-link, hanging loops created from a single piece of wood.

Lovespoons were made in all the remoter districts of Wales from around the 1620s to the beginning of the 20th century. Antique spoons now sell at from £40 ($95) a spoon.

Among the imported treen items, which originally were everyday household ware, were a French truffle collector's pail — priced at £58 ($150) — and a three-foot by 2½-foot grape dish originally used in the Spanish vineyards — priced at £37 ($90).

A battered decoy duck, showing countless scars of the shoots it had attended since it was made in 1800, changed hands for £25 ($60).

CONNOTATIVE VALUE

Often in the antiques' sphere it is not so much the object itself which attains value but its connotations.

For example, there are many 18th-century lowboys in existence. Few, however — like the one shown at the Chelsea fair — still carry their original maker's label on which he advertises his other services to customers.

John Elliott — the label explains— was not just a dealer in furniture. He was also "joyner and turner, a hanger of new fashion spring bells in gentlemen's houses, in the same manner as in London, a framer of pictures and looking glasses." Thoughtfully he also reminds customers that he could be found "opposite the King's Arms in High Street, Leicester."

Another furniture piece, which sold almost immediately on its "human interest" to the tune of £1,000 ($2,400), was a small Georgian bureau. Although pretty, this might have been an unremarkable piece had it not been established that this desk was once used regularly by Sir Winston Churchill at his English country home, Chartwell.

Status Studied

REGINA (CP) — Indian status emerged as a major concern in Thursday's working sessions of the Saskatchewan All Chiefs' Conference, attended by elegates from the province's 67 bands. Treaty rights Saskatchewan indians want to see incorporated into the federal Indian Act include guarantees for freedom from taxation, free education, health care and fishing and hunting rights, and economic development.

A Line of Hills Splits 2 Worlds

By JONATHAN SHARP

TUNG KWAN, China (Reuter) — The line of grey hills clearly visible on the southern horizon is a constant reminder to the Chinese peasant here of a vastly different world of bright lights and elusive riches.

Beyond the hills lies Hong Kong, a haven for hundreds of thousands of refugees from China.

Tung Kwan county, a land of picturesque villages nestling in lush farmland, is about 25 miles from the Hong Kong border, close enough for the simplest transistor radios to pick up the British colony's radio stations which offer insights into a way of life almost totally at odds with the Spartan values of China's Communist society.

A group of British journalists, several of them based in Hong Kong, were invited to spend 24 hours here and received frank answers to questions on "illegal migrants" as they are called in China.

SOME LEFT HOMES

"Yes, it is a problem," said a commune official. Since the Communist takeover in China in 1949, more than 10 people from his commune had left their homes here for the clandestine and highly dangerous journey to Hong Kong.

Most of them took the usual route for refugees in recent years—the long and perilous swim from the Chinese coast, which has earned them the name of "freedom swimmers" in Hong Kong's newspapers.

Dead bodies washed up periodically on Hong Kong beaches are gruesome evidence that many of them do not make it.

The official said that in 1969 two of the escapees came back, disillusioned with the alternative society offered by Hong Kong.

"They thought they could make a lot of money on the other side, but found they couldn't even get a job," he said.

Neither of those who returned was punished and they now help with a program of "ideological education" aimed at persuading young people that the image of Hong Kong as a land of easy living and quick fortunes on the stock market is false.

TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

This message is drummed into children from the moment they enter primary school. Half a day a week is devoted to what is called general political education, which includes a sizable slice on the evils of Hong Kong society.

An indication that the authorities here are relatively relaxed about the issue is the fact that Hong Kong Chinese are allowed to come here to visit relatives and one group was seen here on a sightseeing trip.

According to figures given by officials here the number of illegal migrants from this county is small. Other areas closer to Hong Kong with greater refugee problems may be more wary of outsiders.

CN TRACK GETS CPR'S 'LAST SPIKE'

TORONTO (CP) — Again, they have hammered home the last spike of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

But this time it was on a seldom-used Canadian National line about 30 miles northwest of Toronto.

The re-enactment was for the benefit of camera crews producing for the CBC television series based on Pierre Berton's book The National Dream.

The original site of the historic even has changed considerably since 1885 but researchers, armed with photographs taken on that day, identified a section of the Caledon East track near Toronto as having similar terrain.

Prisoner Deaths Questioned

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International asked Brazil today for an impartial inquiry into the recent deaths of about 25 alleged subversives who died in police custody.

The London-based organization, which is concerned with political prisoners throughout the world, said in a statement that political prisoners have been "run down" or shot by friends in exchanges of fire with police "with such surprising frequency that we believe an impartial inquiry is essential."

It said it was also concerned at reports that a number of those who died were tortured.

Martin Ennals, secretary-general of Amnesty, has noted 25 recent deaths for which police explanations seem inadequate, the statement said. The deaths were listed in a letter

B.C. Plant Shut By U.S. Firm

GOLDEN (CP) — Canadian Willamette, a wood specialty plant here, will be closed May 10, the parent company, Bohemia Inc. of Eugene, Ore., said Friday.

S. E. Pittman, senior vice president of Bohemia, said continuing difficulty in obtaining an adequate supply of cedar is the reason for closure.

The plant employes about 40 hourly-paid workers in the mill and office, and an additional 30 workers in the bush.

GALLUP POLL

Logic Behind Minority Nod

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

In explaining why they think a minority government is good for the nation, the majority of voters (54%) offer three main reasons.

Half of them approve such a situation because they feel it entails a series of checks and balances in Parliament, and gives the opposition parties a better chance to voice their opinions. This benefits the country as a whole, they claim, because opposition parties represent many voters and have good ideas.

In addition, they say that some o fCanada's best governments have had a minority, resulting in a need for all members to be on the alert.

"It keeps MPs where they should be — in the House," said a westerner. Another voter in Ontario put it this way: "Everyone stays awake — and on their toes." (50%).

In second place is the opinion that a minority government produces better legislation, as it must work harder to stay in power (31%).

More than one in 10 of those who like a minority situation think it benefits the people themselves, and name such benefits as reduced taxation, or higher old age pensions recently introduced. "They have to pay more attention to what we want," is a frequent claim (12%). Another 5% give other reasons, while 8% cannot explain their viewpoint.

On the other hand, 27 of the total electorate dislike a minority government, half the number who approve it. These voters object to a minority situation mainly because they believe that any governing power should have the right to clear-cut opinions, and the authority to carry out their plans. "We can't have a strong country with a weak government" is their view in general (50%).

Another strong objection is that when the opposition parties become stronger than the government, there is too much compromise and no clear leadership (24%).

About one in 10 complains about the resulting bickering in Parliament. "Everyone is fighting and it slows up Parliament's work," many of these voters say (12%). Another 9% give other answers, while 12% are undecided.

These facts of public reactions were established in a study with a national random sample of 713 adults in personal, at-home interviews. A sample of this size is accurate within a 4-percentage-point margin of error, 19 out of 20 times.

Watergate In Calgary?

EDMONTON (CP) — The government was bugged Friday over allegations that the office of Mayor Rod Sykes of Calgary had been bugged with an electronic listening device.

A cry of "Watergate" was heard in the legislature.

Roy Wilson (SC — Calgary Bow) asked the attorney-general if he had "received any reports of alleged electronic bugging of Mayor Sykes' office as broadcast on Radio Station CFCN this morning?"

Attorney-General Merv Leitch replied that he had not received any such reports "to my knowledge."

Those Time-Savers Prove Costly

Tabulating the questions asked over a period of six years on an open-line radio gardening program, those concerning lawn troubles outnumber all others 10 to 1. The majority wanted to know why their lawn was going brown.

There are one or two pets and diseases that can cause browning, but by far the most common cause is the way we treat the grass and the corner-cutting labor-saving methods we use in order to save a little time.

The tendency today is to look upon a lawn as a status symbol but we are no longer prepared to invest our money or our time in providing or performing the essentials that make a good lawn.

GARDENING
jack beastall

Although we have more leisure hours than any previous generation we are inclined to spend many of those extra hours looking for any device that will "save" time.

Unfortunately, good lawns are not the result of saving time. Most of the complaints about poor lawns and brown lawns can be directly traced to some time-saving product or device.

Fifty years ago it was no disgrace to have a few dandelions or daisies growing in a lawn. If we enjoyed them they were left there, if not we removed them.

That was before the advent of herbicides (weed-killers). The manufacturers soon brain-washed us into believing a weed in the lawn placed us on the lowest rung (or pushed us right off) the social ladder.

We used their products to the tune of millions a year regardless of side effects, but it proved to be a labor and time saving product that caused deterioration of our lawns.

In all fairness we admit we were warned to make only one application a year followed by a fairly heavy application of fertilizer to rebuild the strength of the grass.

We ignored the warning, and today we prefer our weed killer and fertilizer mixed together to save a few minutes. So, we apply weed killer six times a year instead of once, and the grass weakens, dies out, and is replaced with moss and an ever increasing number of weeds.

The manner in which the grass is cut and the device used for cutting determines to a great extent whether a lawn improves with time or deteriorates.

For generations the finest lawns were always mown with a scythe. Aside from the healthful exercise we all need, any man should be proud to acquire the art of scything, but in an affluent society it is considered degrading to swing a scythe on a residential lawn.

Next to the scythe, the near perfect lawn cutting tool is the reel-type mower. When properly adusted and sharpened it is still the best machine for the pocket-handkerchief lawns found in most gardens.

The scissor cutting action is ideal for fine lawn grasses, it never scalps high spots because it cannot be pushed forward when the blades contact the soil, and it provides, like the scythe, some of the exercise needed for a gardener's health.

A man using a push mower is now looked upon as an unfortunate soul unable to afford a power machine, whereas he is more likely to be a knowledgable gardener displaying his wisdom.

But this is the age of power. Even the lawnmower that cuts our 50 square feet of grass has to be power driven.

The price of a professional reel type power mower is more than we feel like paying, so we settle for anything, good or bad, that has a motor to drive it.

Popular today is the rotary scythe designed to cut tall weeds, coarse native grasses and light underbrush. This machine equipped with a steamlined cover and eye-appeal enamel, is now called a rotary lawn mower.

Having but a single blade it depends on speed for its cutting action, which is really a tearing action. It is the browning and dying of the torn cells that give the lawn a brown sheen two days after mowing.

The power of these mowers is sufficient to cut right into the soil when passing over humps, but the four wheels prevent cutting in hollows, so that the lawn becomes patches of brown interspersed with rich green.

Regarldess of whether we use a good or a poor mowing device our mowing habits can often do more damage than good. Most of us look upon mowing as a necessary evil to be disposed of as soon as possible, forgetting that a good lawn requires time and effort to make it good, and to maintain it in good condition.

The first requirement is a lawn cutting tool that is sharp, well lubricated, and clean. Ninety per cent are neither sharp, well lubricated, nor clean, because we are usually short of time.

Second is a low cutting speed, never over two miles an hour, whether pushed or power driven.

Third, a small lawn should be cut in a different direction at each mowing, for example, first cut north and south, next, east and west, third, NE to SW, fourth NW to SE. Garden lawns have very uneven surfaces and this changing of direction makes for a more even overall cut.

The fourth requirement is that only one-eighth inch of grass foliage be removed at each cutting. To cut off more exposes soft foliage which yellows as soon as the sun shines. During the growing season (spring and fall) lawns must be cut three times a week.

A lot of the yellowing and browning in lawns is due to our attitude that "the lawn isn't long enough yet to cut." Until we change our thinking we shall never have a lawn of which we can be truly proud.

The next labor saving device responsible for brown patches is the sprinkler. Sprinklers range in price from $1 — $30.

A high price does not indicate high efficiency. Test for yourself with empty tin cans spaced over the lawn. Some will fill with water while other remain almost empty. Where the empties are the brown spots will appear. A tiny sprinkler covering a small area and frequently moved often does the most efficient watering job.

The last labor saving device is the automatic fertilizer spreader. These were designed to distribute fertilizer evenly over large areas when pushed in a straight line at a steady speed.

On the small garden lawn they dump excessive amounts at every turn, and when taking a bend which causes one wheel to run faster than the other. Broadcasting fertilizer by hand may not impress the neighbors, but it is best for the lawn.

The browned lawns of which we complain are often of our own making. Until we cease to equate elaborate equipment with standing in the community, and cease looking upon work with our hands and simple tools as menial, our brown lawns will tell all who see them that we still have a lot to learn.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

All hardy annuals can be planted outdoors, after being gradually hardened off. If you buy these plants, be sure they have already been outdoors or put them out in the days and in at nights for a half a week before planting them in the garden.

Prune forsythia if not already done; cut back half way on each flowering branch.

Sow zinnia seeds indoors; and African and French marigolds. All these are quick growers needing good soil and warm conditions to get a good start. Transplant every seedling to flats of soil for two or three weeks of growing in good strong light until they go out in daytime for hardening off.

Picket Charge Not Proven

VANCOUVER (CP) — Denny's Restaurant Friday lost a supreme court bid to have four alleged pickets sent to jail for contempt of a court injunction against picketing at the restaurant. Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson ruled the firm had not produced sufficient identification.

Cruise to Hawaii with P&O.
Two weeks, four island ports.
From $440.

For a fortunate few, there is a different Hawaii.

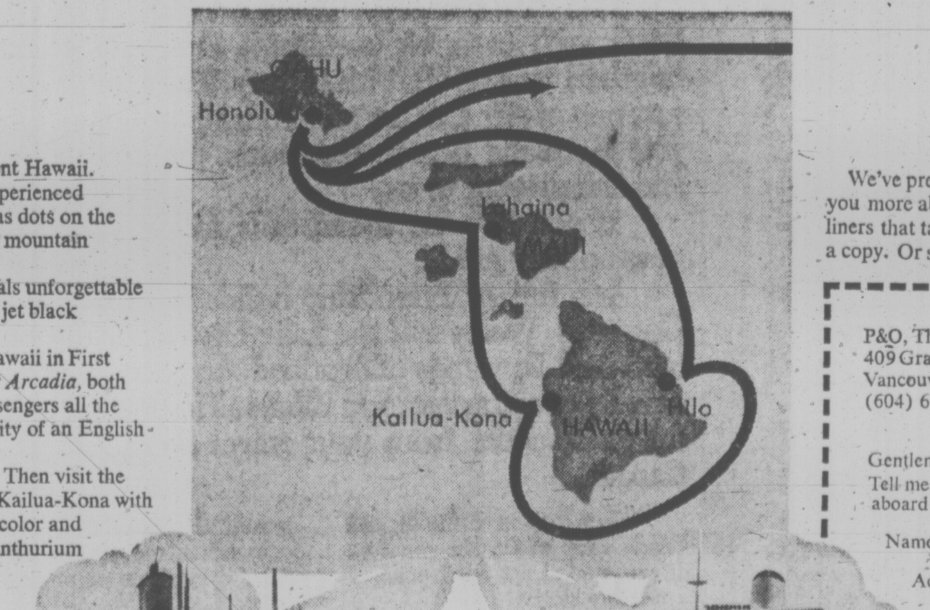
It is the Hawaii that can only be experienced aboard a ship. Where islands appear as dots on the horizon and draw slowly nearer, their mountain peaks shrouded in mist and clouds.

Where cruising coastal waters reveals unforgettable views of rain forests, quiet coves, and jet black beaches of volcanic sand.

P&O invites you to discover this Hawaii in First Class comfort aboard our Oronsay or Arcadia, both registered in Britain, and offering passengers all the friendly service and gracious hospitality of an English country inn.

You'll make two calls at Honolulu. Then visit the historic old whaling port of Lahaina. Kailua-Kona with its deserted temples. Hilo, rich in the color and fragrance of orchids, gardenias, and anthurium by the million.

Oronsay and Arcadia will make three cruises this spring, ranging in length from 14 to 18 days. You can sail from Vancouver on May 21, June 4, or June 21. Cruise fares on these all-First Class ships are as low as $440 (based on double occupancy), including transportation, meals and entertainment.



We've prepared a colorful, 16-page booklet to tell you more about our Hawaii and the big white P&O liners that take you there. Ask your travel agent for a copy. Or send in the coupon today.

Bad King John Did One Good Thing!

SAINT-EMILION, France (CP) — Even the French have to acknowledge that an English king was responsible for a smart move in the French wine industry. In a charter in 1199, King John created the little town of Saint-Emilion into a district to be administered by an elected jurade or council for the purpose of control over the local wine production.

However King John wasn't meddling in something that wasn't his business. Saint-Emilion was part of the Duchy of Aquitaine. John was the Duke of Aquitaine by virtue of inheritance. His mother, Eleanor of Aquitaine, broughtthe duchy with her when she married Henry II of England.

Saint-Emilion is a delightful medieval town built on a hill, with narrow streets ,ancient ramparts, the oldest subterranean church in Europe, cloisters and acres of surrounding vineyards.

There are some 85 individual wine growers who bottle and sell their wine under the Saint-Emilion seal and the controlled classification. The four classifications are Premier Grand Cru class, Grand Cru, all preceded by Saint-Emilion, with the fourth and least expensive called just Saint-Emilion.

Saint-Emilion is only a short drive from Bordeaux, the centre of what is considered France's best wine-growing area. It includes Saint-Emilion and the districts of Medoc, Pomerol, Entre-Deux Mers (Between Two Seas) and Cotes de Blaye, all well-known names to wine drinkers. This Bordeaux area produces some 500 million bottles of wine a year.

Each wine has its own particular quality. Medoc is perhaps the best known. Its ruby red wine is said to have a "delicate nobility." Robust is the word applied to the Saint-Emilion vintage. The red wine of the Pomerol is considered to be "round, full-bodied and elegant." The Cotes de Blaye and neighboring regions produce red wines that are "supple and well balanced" and also some good white wine.

The Romans discovered the area and its wines became a favorite with the Roman emperors just as, in the 18th centtury, it was the fashionable wine for the French courtiers at their parties.

Today the quality of the wines of all the areas is controlled. But it was Kin gJohn who created that first jurade with authority to regulate the yield, arrange the transportation and the storing of the wine. But even more important, the jurade determined the date for the harvesting.

Inspectors rode on horses on inspection tours through the vineyards ,calculated the sunny days still needed and then proclaimed the harvest date. This not only ensured the best quality but prevented vvineyard owners from stealing a march on each other by hharvesting too early to be the first to market.

Today the vineyards are still inspected and the harvest date is still proclaimed on a Sunday about the third week of September. This is the New Wine Festival in Saint-Emilion. Members of the jurade attend mass, dressed in their splendid scarlet robes, have lunch together and then go to the underground church where new members are received. Today there are several thousand honorary mmbers of the Tour de Roi, the harvest is proclaimed and blessed .It's a colorful sight and draws many tourists.

In the spring ,about May 15, there's another festival when the first tiny flowers appear in the vineyards.

Five-Fold Jump Seen for Power

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. predicts that by the end of this century demand for Canadian electrical energy will multiply by five times.

Walter Ward, chairman and chief executive officer, told the company's annual meeting of shareholders that installed electrical capacity in the next 27 years will have to be five times greater than "all of the electrical energy that we have generated and delivered over the past 80 years."

He said Canadian General Electric faces an exciting future of continuing and expended use of electrical power.

Nuclear generating stations will be providing more of it, as much as half the electrical energy in Ontario by 1990.

Ward also said more reason and less emotionalism should be used in discussions about foreign ownership of companies in Canada.

"In the best interests of all Canadians we urge that the country keeps its doors open wide to the vast technological and financial resources of other nations, in addition to developing its own, so that Canadians may capitalize on both quickly and efficiently and in the best interests of Canada's own designated ambitions."

1. Freedom from any activity; rest; respite, intermission.
2. A period of rest, and freedom from work, study, etc. a time of recreation.

In his interpretation of recreation he does at least warm up a little . . . Refreshment in body or mind.

Absolute rot! Utter tripe! Rubbish! Repudiate this nonsense and refuse to simply settle for rest and respite. How does it go . . . you only pass this way once?

Nowhere do I find in the text the words keen pleasure, a time of joy, fun, excitement, or letting it all hang out, raising a little hell! or seeking and finding a personally desirable change of pace, place and face; an escape to new and different dimensions . . .

Those two or three weeks are precious; with careful holiday planning you can boost up your batteries enough to get you through the following eleven months! (and if you work it right, young or old, you both might walk around with an enigmatic smile on your faces).

The pleasure starts and can be enjoyed well before the long awaited parole from the clock or the kitchen sink, it starts when you and yours start to dream about it! . . . but share your dreams; call us, let your enthusiasm rub off onto people who weave dreams for a living . . . it's what we do best and will keep on doing while it remains fun. We will put it all together for you into one carefree happy holiday . . . which leads me to the commercial.

The world is now measured in hours rather than miles, wages rather than life savings. The most expensive item for the traveller used to be just getting there! Not any more.

Not only can you fly for less today than ever before but by a happy state of affairs you can fly for less with what is probably the finest airline in the world. WARDAIR CANADA LIMITED.

We will give you instant confirmation over the telephone and you can go for 2-3-4-or five weeks at the same low price so you don't need your slide rule or a degree in higher mathematics to figure out the costs! . . . they're less believe me. Let someone like Harry introduce you to Alfred the Great, Thomas Hardy, Lorna Doone, Ben Nevis and a bunch of other friends.

THE BANKES ARMS HOTEL.

Far from the madding crowd in a village in Dorset, you can walk round the small timbered cottage where Thomas Hardy wrote his name into history. If you mind your head on the low beams you can see it all without getting a bump.

Eighteen days visiting 26 cities, 9 castles, 12 cathedrals and dozens of villages, pubs and cottages like Thomas Hardy's.

And you can do it all for less than $28 a day for land arrangements. That's 3 meals every day, a hotel with bath, sightseeing, a host and eighteen hundred years of British history. The Grand Tour is just one of Air Canada's Friendship holidays, where you leave the hotels, the meals, the arrangements and the driving to us.

If you like the sound of it, follow it up in our new holiday guide.

It's full of Friendship holidays. In Devon and Cornwall, Wales and the Lake District or the Highlands and Lowlands of Scotland. And dozens of other equally exciting vacation values all in one big colourful guide. Free from your travel agent. Or us Air Canada.

He'll take you and talk you through eighteen hundred years of history the length and breadth of Britain in eighteen days. You'll meet poets, playwrights and princes. You'll see kings, castles and cathedrals. You'll marvel at the lochs in Scotland, the Lake District and the locals at every stop you make.

And knowing Harry he'll know the name of the landlord, which beer to order and the measurements of the barmaid.

In fact Harry's equally at home anywhere in Britain. Whether he's introducing you to Alfred the Great in Winchester, Sir Francis Drake in Plymouth, the Black Mountains of South Wales, Edinburgh Castle or the historic colleges of Oxford. Harry knows them all like the palm of his hand and better than any guide book to boot. And while you soak up Britain and stay in handsome hotels from Dorchester to Dunfermline you'll be making friends with your 31 travelling companions. And long after you've tried remembering the name of Thomas Hardy's wife or the height of Ben Nevis you'll remember the friends you made. And of course Harry. (He reckons he's made more than 300 new friends this year too.)

Air Canada's Friendship holidays—18 days for only $488. That's just $27.11 a day! With private bath, all meals, sightseeing, Harry and 31 new friends—it's a ride you can't afford to miss. Mind you, if you'd like to try something a little shorter, we've lots of 7 day tours, so perhaps you could even combine them.

We've only quoted prices for land arrangements here. So now let's look at the best way to get you there.

Our Economy Excursion fare remains the best buy. The round trip 22—45 day fare shown here is for April, May, September and October. For the higher mid-summer rate check with your travel agent or Air Canada.

Whenever you fly, our varied schedules offer you real flexibility. You can fly to any of our eleven European destinations and return from any one of the others. And, of course, children under 12 fly half fare. You can fly when you feel like it—if you fly at weekends, there's a small surcharge—and you don't have to book or pay in advance. And you can use our Fly Now-Pay Later Plan—or your credit card.

Whichever way you look at it, from fares to ground packages, we've covered all the ways to give you the finest, most flexible holiday for your money. And it's all explained in our holiday guide. Why not pick up a copy? It's free from your travel agent or us. Or mail the coupon and we'll send you a copy.

Furore Over Lost Day On Vacation

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — The way pottery worker Douglas Hall figured it, his 14-night package holiday in Spain actually only provided him with a hotel room for 13 nights. So he went to court.

The decision in his favor, along with several similar rulings in earlier cases, has caused an uproar in the British travel industry. One expert estimates it would cost more than £10 million (about $24 million) if travel brochures have to be rewritten to conform with the letter of the law.

Hall, 36, his wife and young daughter went to Spain last year on what was advertised in a Clarksons Holidays Ltd. brochure as a 15-day holiday with 14 nights in a hotel.

They arrived at 6 a.m. and Hall's lawyer argued that this should not be counted as the first night although their room was available from the minute they arrived. Clarksons said it did count as their first night and it was so stated elsewhere in the brochure.

On the final day of their holiday the Halls had to check out of their room early and spend the evening sitting in the hotel lounge until their scheduled midnight departure.

FIRM FINED

The court awarded Mr. and Mrs. Hall $12 each compensation, fining Clarksons $3,600 plus $1,680 court costs after finding it guilty of "recklessly" making a false statement. The company was acquitted of knowingly making a false statement.

Recognizing that this was an important test case with serious ramifications for the tourist industry, the judge said: "It seems that if a company clearly and bluntly tells their prospective customers exactly what they are going to get they would not be likely to find themselves in difficulties of this sort."

The case, heard in Stafford, was only the latest of a number that have upset the industry. In an earlier suit it was demonstrated that a firm—in this case Thomson Holdings Ltd. owned by Canadian-born Lord Thomson—can be prosecuted more than once for the same offence.

Nathan Brown of Lancashire charged that he, his wife and daughter stayed in a hotel in Greece which the Thomson brochure said had a private swimming pool, a children's paddling pool and a nightclub on the beach. The Browns said there was no wading pool and no nightclub and the pool was not private, being used by local residents and Americans from a nearby army base.

The company was fined $2,400 and Brown was awarded $120 compensation.

Lawyers for Thomson, saying they would appeal, noted the company had been fined last year for making the same statement. The jury decided that a plea of autrefois convict—that they had already been convicted of the offence—was not valid.

The fear in the industry is that all holiday brochures now may have to be recalled and amended to avoid repetitive court actions by others on the same grounds.

Aside from the cost, spokesmen said there was a danger from the consumers' point of view that nervous travel agents would cut published information to a bare minimum to avoid misinterpretation of their words.

Canadian Dresses Going Up

MONTREAL (CP) — A worldwide explosion in demand for textiles is forcing clothing prices up 10 to 50 per cent on next fall's merchandise, Montreal manufacturers claim.

Spokesmen for several clothing factories say the most dramatic price increase will be on all-wood suits, coats and dresses which could jump 50 per cent in price.

Clothing made from synthetic material, cotton or wool blends will also increase in price about 10 per cent but some lines such as sleep wear and lingerie will hold steady at least until next spring, the manufacturers said.

Bob Rubin, owner of Rubin Bros. Clothers, one of the largest men's wear factories in Canada said the high price of cloth will force suit and coat prices up.

"Suits that were $125 will go up to $135 or $140-12 to 15 per cent."

Another manufacturer said cotton and synthetic materials have not been hit so far but might be up 10 per cent by next spring.

Years of War Take Mental Toll

By ANGELA FATHERS

BIEN HOA, South Vietnam (Reuter) — In South Vietnam's only mental home 50 deranged women live in a 40-foot-long room where the low moaning of some patients never stops. They sleep on mats on communal concrete platforms with barely room to turn over. They share one stinking toilet and two water taps.

During the day they are allowed out in their dusty, bare-earth compound. Overnight they are locked in. If an attendant opens the door the more frenzied women crowd around her. Others stare sullenly from where they lie, complaining of suffocation.

Some 2,000 cases of schizophrenia, acute psychosis, and severe depression are crammed into this government home in Bien Hoa, 15 miles from Saigon.

Its director, Dr. Do Duong Hiep, says admissions have been steadily increasing since the ceasefire, as movement around the country has become easier.

SHORT OF FUNDS

Hiep says the government has so many other priorities that funds are not available to give patients the space to live in privacy. He says two per cent of South Vietnam's population is suffering mental instability dur to the war.

Some have had husbands or children killed, some have become separated from their families. Others have been dodging the draft or cracked under the strain of poverty.

Yet the country has only one mental home and only four psychiatrists. Mentally sick soldiers are catered for with 100 beds at Saigon's largest military hospital.

Dr. Hiep is the only one of eight doctors at Bien Hoa who has had psychiatric training. A one-year course in London.

Saigon's medical school has no psychiatry courses and from the financial viewpoint there is no incentive to study it, says Dr. Hiep, also director of the country's mental health program.

The majority of patients at Bien Hoa are in the 18-35 age group.

POSSESSED BY DEVILS

Vietnamese tolerate the mentally ill but traditionally believe they are possessed by devils. Some Buddhists believe they are the reiscarnation of ancestors who have misbehaved in an earlier life.

Many of the Bien Hoa patients have already been treated by what Dr. Hiep describes as witch doctors—quacks who claim to chase out devils by beating or burning the deranged or doping them with Oriental herb medicines.

Despite the conditions at Bien Hoa, patients are treated kindly by their nurses. Electric treatment is given only to the severely depressed or suicidal cases. Dr. Hiep relies largely on tranquillizers which, he believes, in regular doses eventually have a calming effect on patients.

Vietnam has no provincial mental health service for discharged patients. Dr. Hiep admits that more than half his patients return to the home again and again.

CELLS HOLD 30

New patients are put into the admission compound where the more violent may be locked in. Its bleak central yard is encircled by small private rooms containing two iron bedsteads which cost patients 200 plastres (50 cents) a day. Non-paying cases are herded 30 to 40 at a time into the dark, communal cell.

The arrival of visitors causes the inmates to beat their feet in unison against the doors. On one occasion they broke the main gate down and stoned the nurses.

One inmate who lost her husband in last year's offensive dances alone and barebreasted in her room. Next door, a woman who has just escaped and been brought back pregnant shouts defiantly through her bars that she is not pregnant.

In the children's section 60 youngsters who share two dormitories gather in the afternoons in a corner of their compound. Some lie half-naked on mats, others gaze mesmerically into space. All of them are dirty, surrounded by flies.

BOY TETHERED

One 13-year-old boy stands like a Christ, ankles and wrists tied to a pole with greying bandages. He has been at the home for two years but, if let loose, attacks the other children and sometimes the doctor. His mother visits him occasionally. No one knows the whereabouts of his father.

The children have a climbing-rack and a slide, but there is little else to do.

"Many of the patients are a direct result of the 1968 and last year's offensives," says Dr. Hiep. "But the effect of the war is not immediate. We will be coping with even more cases in the future."

He is instituting a psychology course at Saigon's medical school. Before long he hopes to have psychiatric doctors and nurses in dispensaries throughout the hospital.

He also has plans for a new mental home in Can Tho which would service the Mekong Delta area. But he is not hopeful about funds.

MILT'S NOT PROUD OF HIS RECORD

"I've killed more wolves in my time than anyone else in the world," says the 51-year-old hunter who has served for 22 years in the predator control branch of the British Columbia Wildlife Service.

Warren said the bulk of his wolf kills were made a number of years ago when the public attitude favored such action, due in part, he believes, to a bad wolf image created by folklore and nursery stories.

been banned, it's Little Red

"If any story should have Riding Hood."

Hunter Warren's comment came in an interview following a trip into the Burns Lake area where ranchers have been complaining that large wolf packs are wiping out game and threatening cattle herds.

Among the ranchers are Myles and Hugh Shelford, brothers of a former B.C. agriculture minister, Cyril Shelford, who recently called on the government to launch an all-out poison war on the wolves.

The Shelfords say the wolves have wiped out deer herds in the area and are endangering moose. They say they are also concerned about what the wolves may do to more than 500 head of cattle they expect to turn loose on the range this spring and summer.

The ranchers contend the only real solution to the wolf problem is to revive poison control methods that were used 20 years ago to cut down wolf packs.

Warren says he knows all about those years.

"I killed by poison more than 600 wilves during 1953, 1954 and 1955," he said. "I hate to think how many I killed in the 22 years I've been with the department."

He said he knows more about wolves now than he did then and now tends to be on the side of the wolves rather than the ranchers.

He turned down ranchers' requests that he poison-bait the range area.

"I refused because I didn't think it necessary to bait the area at this time," he said.

He also rejected ranchers' arguments that wolves are to blame for the scarcity of game.

"It's the severe weather conditions of the last two or three winters before this one that are responsible for most of the reduced number of game animals," said the predator hunter, whose territory covers virtually the entire northern B.C. area from Prince George to the Yukon boundary.

MOOSE INCREASING

"This winter has been a comparatively good one for deer and moose. We took a moose count in January and it shows the moose are making a comeback."

He admitted there is no shortage of wolves in northern B.C.

"There are about 150 in several packs running on and around Lake Williston and another 100 or more in the Babine Lake district."

Lake Williston is formed by the backed-up waters of Peace River hydroelectric development in northeastern B.C.

Warren said there are no cattle ranches anywhere near the two areas, which attract large numbers of hunters from the lower B.C. mainland and from the United States trying to bag trophy wolves. They are charged a $40 trophy fee by the wildlife service.

"There is considerable public opinion against this kind of hunting," said Warren. "I'm sure this is the last year it will be allowed.

"Times have changed. A lot of us have learned to know and respect the wolf. And it's obvious people don't want him wiped out just because he's there. He's part of our environment."

FIRST SAILING AUGUST 1973.
(Embark from Either Coast)

Tailor your own vacation package. Want to match a world cruise itinerary to your vacation schedule? There's an Oriental Empress world cruise departing every 100 days. You can go at the time of year which works out best on your calendar. And at first class fares which work out best with your pocketbook—less than on most other cruise ships.

You'll be sailing on the 23,000 ton S.S. Oriental Empress. She's a handsome cruise liner built to carry 500 passengers, but we limit her to 350 passengers for spacious comfort and relaxation. Formerly the S.S. President Wilson, the Oriental Empress is stabilized and fully air-conditioned. And she has been tastefully refurbished to impart a gracious Oriental charm.

Attractive accommodations with nearby facilities are available from $2000 ($20 a day) ranging to deluxe suites at $14,500 ($145 a day) per person.

To learn how you can see the world with an Empress, contact your travel agent or write for our new full-color brochure.

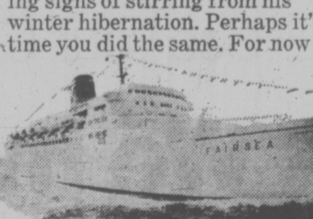
INTRODUCING SITMAR CRUISES TO WARM, SUNNY ALASKA.

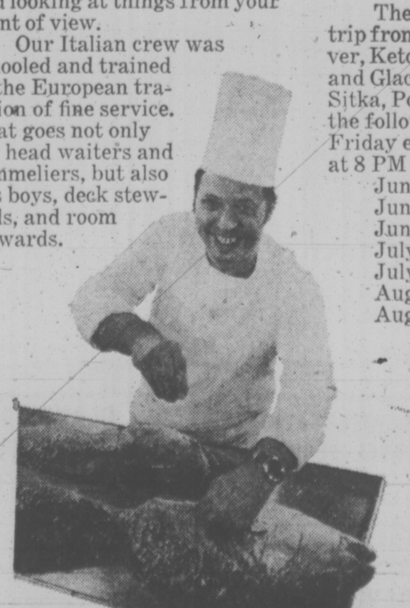
The Alaskan brown bear is showing signs of stirring from his winter hibernation. Perhaps it's time you did the same. For now is the time to consider a series of very special cruises from San Francisco to the last bastion of Western wilderness: Alaska.



PICK UP A LITTLE ITALIAN ON YOUR WAY TO ALASKA

There are a lot of ships, and a lot of cruises. Most are pretty much the same. So at Sitmar, we work very hard at being different, and looking at things from your point of view.

Our Italian crew was schooled and trained in the European tradition of fine service. That goes not only for head waiters and sommeliers, but also bus boys, deck stewards, and room stewards.



Picture yourself being cradled in the lap of luxury on a First Class cruise ship, the T.S.S. Fairsea, of Liberian registry. At 25,000 gross registered tons, it's just the right size for you, and a cruise through the Inland Passage.

PLENTY TO DO, NOTHING TO DO

Aside from the breathtaking sights you'll see in Canada and Alaska, the Fairsea offers some pretty breathtaking activities on its own. Six pubs, dancing in three different lounges, an all-night discotheque, a gymnasium and sauna.

Three swimming pools, with plenty of open deck space. Two card rooms, and even a library.

WHERE AND WHEN

The T.S.S. Fairsea sails round trip from San Francisco to Vancouver, Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway and Glacier Bay (cruising only), Sitka, Port Hardy and Victoria on the following Friday evenings at 8 PM:
June 1
June 15
June 29
July 13
July 27
August 10
August 24

Ask your travel agent for our Alaskan brochure, complete with prices and everything else you'd like to know about us. Or send in the coupon below, and we'll answer by return mail.

New Affluence Rocks New Zealanders

By ROBERT TRUMBULL
New York Times

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — In one of the many new homes in a middle-class Wellington residential section the silverware is American, the stereo German, the toaster British and the shiny sedan in the carport Japanese.

In the rural areas newly affluent farmers are buying materials for long-postponed improvements — and sometimes find themselves outbid by their neighbors for scarce items.

The highly literate New Zealanders, generally curious about distant countries and able to get adequate foreign exchange after years of currency restrictions that had virtually ruled out foreign vacations, are planning trips abroad in numbers never seen before by travel agents interviewed in Auckland and Wellington.

Not content to luxuriate in the prosperity reflected by such statistics as a 34 per cent rise in home construction and a 20 per cent rise in registered automobiles this year, New Zealanders are bent on preserving the purity of their environment as well.

A national outcry against plans to raise the level of Lake Manapouri in a giant hydroelectric power project, which would have erased many lovely beanches and trees from a remote beauty spot that few New Zealanders see, forced the Government to halt the $156-million development substantially short of programmed capacity.

"The image of New Zealand as a country of good, clean air is valuable," A. J. Walding, Minister for the Environment and for Overseas Trade, said in an interview. "It helps our food exports."

The relatively pollution-free environment, invariably praised by visitors from the United States, also helps to lure immigrants like the James Krons, a young American couple formerly active in New York publishing circles and now happily running a bookstore and lending library in the small town of Kerikeri, in the Bay of Islands resort area 100 miles north of Auckland.

The material gains reflect a national prosperity that few new Zealanders, if any, foresaw a year or two ago, when preparations for the entry of Britain into the European Economic Community cast a dark shadow over the future of this country's vital diary sales in the British market.

Seeking replacements for traditional British outlets for butter and cheese, many New Zealand entrepreneurs tapped a reservoir of manufacturing and marketing ingenuity.

A small operator in Wellington began making kosher cheese for the American market. Partly processed intestinal tissue from lambs, used in condoms, were also sold in the United States. An aircraft company found a demand for spare parts, no longer made by the original manufacturers, to keep obsolete planes flying.

Larger New Zealand export enterprises also include carpets and toys and engineering expertise through construction contracts in southeast Asia.

Meanwhile, the Economic Community has temporarily eased restrictions on Britain's daily purchases in New Zealand, which have traditionally taken 90 per cent of the cheese and 85 per cent of the butter exported. These and othe agricultural items have accounted for 85 per cent of earnings abroad.

The partial reprieve gives New Zealand until 1977 to phase out 20 per cent of the butter and all the cheese sent to Britain. The agreement is to be reviewed in 1975.

Furthermore, increasing world demand for wool, meat and diary products has gone beyond New Zealand's ability to fill orders. In a year, wool prices have more than doubled and lamb and beef prices are setting records.

Those gains have raised the annual income of the average farmer from $9,500 to about $23,000 in the past year. An average farmer is described as one with 2,000 ewes and 150 to 200 head of beef cattle.

Foreign exchange earnings have reached $1.3 billion, which gives New Zealand, with just under three million people in a country slightly smaller than California, one of the highest per capita foreign-exchange reserves in the world, according to an American economist.

Nonetheless, the spector of the Economic Community still haunts the future.

"If a cold breeze blows on our prices overseas, our large surplus could quickly be gone with the wind," The New Zealand Herald of Auckland warned in a recent editorial.

Prof. Harvery Franklin of Victoria University, Wellington, said in an interview: "New Zealand must develop new markets to maintain the present standard of living, since the population grows at a faster rate than agricultural production."

New Zealanders questioned on wage levels agreed that the New Zealand equivalent of about $6,700 a year would be considered a livable income for a young married couple. Children are subsidized by the welfare state and some costs are low.

"More American students are coming here to get their master's degree because it's cheaper," said Prof. Franklin, who is in the geography department of Victoria University. He cited tuition fees of $90 for the first year and $13 for subsequent years and added that a student could easily live on $55 a week.

Spitfire Loses Battle

TORONTO (CP) — A restored Spitfire of Second World War vintage has lost its battle to remain on display at Ontario Place and has been ordered removed from the grounds.

"I think they probably intend to put up a hotdog stand there," said Bob Hayward, president of the Canadian Fighter Pilots Association which has been asked to buy back the aircraft — believed to be one of four in Canada — for $1 and move it.

In a letter to the assocation, Ian McLennan, director-general of Ontario Place, said the management does not feel the display of military hardware is appropriate to Ontario Place, a government show place on the waterfront.

Up to one million visitors have inspected the Spitfire since it went on display two years ago. It stands with the Second World War destroyer Haida, a tank and an artillery piece.

The 300-member association had returned the aircraft from a sandbank in India where it was discovered by an association member.

Hayward said the association does not feel the request is an ultimatum from the provincial government and plans to meet early next week to decide a course of action.

Smiling Smugglers Flourish In Tiny West African Country

By LARRY HEINZERLING

LOME, Togo (AP) — Tourists splashed in the rolling Atlantic surf, sipped beer on the palm-fringed beach and tanned under a bright African sun while the smugglers casually went about their work.

Three trucks laden with cigarettes, liquor, evaporated milk and other merchandise lumbered into view.

About 30 bare-chested men waiting on the beach hoisted the cases of contraband onto their heads and transferred the load to four dugout canoes bobbing in the shimmering sea.

Later, under a cloudless tropical sky, the motor-powered boats set off on a night journey to Ghana, a few miles to the east.

Lome, a small, dusty port city that serves as Togo's seat of government, is the smuggling capital of West Africa.

The illegal trade is a major source of income for this tiny country of two million.

Smiling traders on the receiving end in Accra, Lagos and other capitals show up with bargains from Togo at private homes and market places.

Customers in Lagos, for example, can buy 200 American or British cigarettes that cost $7.50 in the stores for about $4 from Togo's underground.

Togo collects modest duties on imports that are subsequently smuggled out of the country. And it charges fees and export duties on commodities such as cocoa smuggled into Togo and subsequently exported legally.

Levies on this flourishing two-way traffic add up to a substantial part of the $53 million annual national budget. The illicit trade turnover is estimated to be $20 million to $30 million a year.

Millions of dollars in radios, liquor, cigarettes, perfume, tape recorders and other goods are smuggled into Ghana from Togo.

Lome's booming black market in Ghanaian currency also irritates Ghana's authorities.

Travellers crossing the frontier are assailed by dozens of money changers who swoop upon cars just before they cross into Ghana. Ghanaian money — virtually worthless outside the country — is offered cheaply for United States dollars and other convertible currencies.

Occasionally Ghana strikes back.

The shooting of two smugglers last year, and beefed-up border patrols and army checkpoints on major roads inside Ghana have reduced smuggling and hence the revenue that Togo gets from it.

Western Samoa Frustrating

By JACK McDONALD

APIA, Western Samoa (Reuter) — For years Western Samoa was one of the best-kept secrets of the South Pacific. Then, about a decade ago, it became the first Polynesian island group to obtain independence and decided to share its beautiful beaches, lagoons and waterfalls with the world.

Though the door to tourism has been unlocked, you cannot walk through it easily. The island state needs more hotels and its most distinctive tourist attraction, the home and grave of Robert Louis Stevenson, is a disappointment.

The author of Treasure Island, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde and Kidnapped came here in 1890 in ill health. He built a home, Valima, four miles from Apia, the capital city. His health improved and he continued to write.

The Wrecker, Ebb Tide, Catriona and other stories flowed from his pen until he died four years later, 10,000 miles from his native Scotland.

Towering over his beloved Valima in his simple grave at the crest of Mount Vaea. A path, more like a jungle trail, leads to the simple site. It is steep and often muddy from 240 inches of rain a year. A guide is needed to get there. After a two-hour climb you emerge from a jungle undergrowth in a small clearing where bright coleus flowers grow.

Visitors' criticism over the inaccessibility of the grave is so strong the government is taking bids on a cable car line running up the mountain to it.

The drive to Valima, along the Road of Loving Hearts, is delightful. Trees are heavily laden with huge, pale green breadfruit. This road leads to the grounds, bordered by stately teak and a garden ablaze with bougainvillea, oleander and hibiscus. The Samoan-style home, two storeys, is beautiful.

But the visitor is frustrated to discover that it is the residence of the new head of state and admission is restricted to a few hours a week, and then only by special permit. A move is afoot to build another house for the head of state and restore Valima to its original condition, with Stevenson's furniture and books.

Apia has 28,000 residents and the total population of all the islands of Western Samoa is about 145,000. The rate of population increase is one of the fastest in the world so, with only a soap factory for industry, tourism is regarded as an economic necessity.

The government gives each farm owner along Samoa's 511 miles of road small poinciana trees and flowering shrubs to plant and beautify the landscape. It is also appropriating funds for access roads leading to archeological sites inland, one of which has terraced tombs more than 2,000 years old.

Trudeau Pat on Indian Rights

KAMLOOPS — Prime Minister Trudeau told a gathering of Liberal party members Friday that he is waiting to see what action the British Columbia government will take on aboriginal rights.

"It is interesting to hear the NDP in Ottawa talk about aboriginal rights and to hear what they would do, and then to look and see what they are doing in Victoria," he said.

He said he does not believe in "theoretical statements on oboriginal rights." The NDP has never explained specifically what its policies would be.

Asked later when the Liberal government would take action on its white paper outlining possible revision of the Indian Act, the prime minister said: "It is up to the Indians."

GANDER, Nfld. — "I was reading. I heard the fire alarm and thought it was some clown pulling a prank," Premier Frank Moores said after escaping down a makeshift ladder from a hotel fire here early this morning.

About 400 persons, most of them attending a three-day Progressive Conservative convention here, were forced into the street when the fire broke out at about 4 a.m.

Moores said he and a number of other provincial cabinet ministers attempted to rouse other guests on the floor as they made their way to the end of a corridor.

CULVER CITY, Calif. — Folk singer Glenn Yarbrough was taken into custody Friday on a misdemeanor warrant charging him with not providing child support for his two children.

Yarbrough, a former member of the Limelighters group, was arrested at his mother-in-law's home in Culver City and later released on $12,000 bail.

The warrant was issued in April after Yarbrough's former wife, Margaret Jones, complained he had failed to make support payments for the couple's two children, Glenn Shean, 14, and Stephany, 12.

Yarbrough was ordered to appear May 14 in San Rafael on the warrant.

DETROIT — A go go girl wearing nothing but her hairdo will be a no-no here if Mayor Roman Gribbs has his way. Gribbs asked Detroit's common council Friday to amend the city's indecent exposure ordinances to cover the anticipated influx of bottomless dancers from suburban bars, where they have appeared recently.

HAIFA, Israel — The luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 is under intense security precautions, but an Israeli seeking to leave the country illegally managed to slip aboard Friday with a group of British seamen, police said.

Ship officers seized Meir Miara, 24, immediately after he boarded the liner and he was arrested. Miara admitted trying to hide aboard the liner.

Miara lined up with a group of British seamen boarding the ship and used his Tadrut (Trade Union Federation) book as a Seaman's pass, passing through an Israeli checkpoint on the pier and a British checkpoint aboard ship.

NEW YORK — Dr. Paul Dudley White was awarded the Eleanor Naylor Dana award for preventive medicine Friday and put in a plug for his "children's crusade."

The pioneer heart doctor, approaching his 87th birthday, said, "We can keep on saving the grandfathers. But we better pay attention to saving the grandchildren. That will save us all in the future.

Children shouldn't get fat, shouldn't smoke and should exercise more and watch television less, he said.

MENTAL EFFORT VITAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who lost both arms eight years ago in an industrial accident said Friday that successful rehabilitation is a mental rather than physical effort.

Allan Brett of Nanaimo told 700 delegates to the international symposium on the industrially injured that the change of mind can be accomplished only through the assistance of others, and a sense of pride in oneself.

Brett, now a personnel supervisor at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., enrolled in classes to complete secondary school when he started his rehabilitation program. He then went on to obtain his Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of Victoria.

Kevin Maher, director of the British Columbia Workmen's Compensation Board, told the symposium he could not condone the policy of some doctors to give severely disabled patients false hope in order to cheer them up.

He also cited a case where extensive efforts were made to save a 17-year-old girl's hand after an accident in a butcher shop.

"The plastic surgeon who operated tried to save as much tissue as possible," he said, "with the result she was left with a completely useless hand to which a prosthesis could not possibly be fitted."

Maher said the girl's hand had to be amputated before the Workmen's Compensation Board "could tackle our job of rehabilitating this woman."

Kenneth Jenkins, chairman of the world commission on vocational rehabilitation, formally recommended that Vancouver should have a special clinic for treating spinal injuries.

Indians March On City Hall

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — About 300 Indians and Metis marched on city hall Friday to protest inaction by city officials on housing problems.

They threatened to demonstrate unless civic officials expressed in some way their concern for the substandard housing in which natives live in the northwestern Saskatchewan city.

Mayor James Maher toured some of the dwellings and agreed immediate action must be taken. He told the demonstrators he will set up an immediate investigation into native housing problems.

A survey in the winter of 1971 showed that 15 per cent of native housing in the city was beyond repair and 90 per cent of the houses required major repairs.

Shakeup No Threat To Ties with West

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev emerged today from the biggest Kremlin shakeup since the ouster of premier Nikita Khrushchev with apparent full support for his program of closer political and economic ties with the West.

The Communist party central committee, which Friday fired two members of the ruling politburo and added three others, praised the "great personal contributions of Leonid Brezhev" in a statement carried by the Tass news agency.

Coming just before Brezhev's trips to West Germany in mid-May and the United States in late June, the statement said the central committee "entirely approves the work being done by the political bureau."

In particular, it said it "approves the work that is being carried out to develop the Soviet Union's relations with states of another social system . . . (and) the activization of the USSR's external economic, reciprocally advantageous ties with these countries."

The statement seemed to support western analysts' views that the politburo changes bolstered Brezhnev's position as first among equals in the Kremlin's collective leadership.

Alberta Bids $1 For Hospital

CALGARY (CP) — The provincial government has offered to buy the city-owned General Hospital for $1, Mayor Rod Sykes has announced.

But the mayor said that he has asked for assurances that the hospital would be a fully independent institution such as the Calgary Foothills Hospital.

Sykes said if General Hospital, a 955-bed complex, was run by a regional district hospital board, money could be raised from Calgary without giving the city control over financial returns.

A letter has been sent to the provincial government, said Sykes, expressing concern about the hospital's autonomy. If the province's response is favorable the proposed sale would go to city commissioners for study.

Recommendations from the commissioners would then go to city council, who would make the final decision.

Sykes said the city offered to sell General Hospital to the province for $1 on two occasions in the last three years. Alderman John Ayer, a member of the hospital board, complained in 1968 that the institution was a drain on the city mill rate.

Ayer said that in past years the city paid from $75,000 to $250,000 annually to operate the hospital. Preliminary budget estimates iindicated that costs for 1973 would be about $1.6 million.

The province previously paid about 99.5-per-cent of the hospital's operating costs, he said.

SALMON RESEARCHERS NOW RUNNING DERBY

There will be some changes in the sixth annual "B.C. Salmon Derby" as such.

The derby, well-known for its $25,000 first prize, will be operated under a new name and sponsor this year by a recently-incorporated, profits-for-research group called The XXV Salmon Research Society of British Columbia.

Renamed the "Export Kings $25,000", the contest will again be held in lower mainland and southern Vancouver Island waters, Aug. 11-12.

No basic rule changes are planned but adjusted fishing boundaries are expected to be announced shortly.

GOLFERS CAN TRY FOR A REAL BIRDIE

BRISBANE, Australia (UPI) — Golfers playing the Boulia course have two new hazards to contend with — a nesting plover and several flocks of sheep.

The plover is sitting on four eggs and conservationists, in co-operation with the golf club, have erected a special timber shield to protect the family.

But since the bird chose the middle of the fourth fairway for its nest, any golfer getting within 10 feet of it is allowed a penalty-free drop.

To complicate matters, hundreds of sheep have been turned loose on the links as mobile "lawnmowers." The club said it was the only way to keep down heavy grass that sprouted after recent flooding.

Cooling Off Sessions For Soccer?

LONDON (Reuter) — The possibility of sending players off for brief periods during matches to allow tempers to cool is being considered by the English Soccer League.

Secretary Alan Hardaker, writing in today's issue of the league magazine, says many officials believe the league's disciplinary rules could be improved by adopting a system of instant punishment such as sending players off for periods of five or 10 minutes.

But, he added, the plan would need long and careful thought and it was not intended that such a rule should be adopted in the immediate future.

Tough new regulations were introduced this season in which players faced automatic suspension if they were sent off or received a series of cautions.

But, says Hardaker, clubs and players had been accused of finding a loophole in the new code by lodging appeals and so delaying suspensions before important matches.

"There are many legislators who wonder whether this aspect of the game could be further improved by introducing the 'sin bin' system of instant match punishment."

Colonels' Purchase Finalized

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Cincinnati television station says the sale of the American Basketball Association's Kentucky Colonels to two Cincinnati men has been finalized.

The sale to Bill De Witt and Brian Heekin of the Cincinnati Hockey Club was made Monday, says WKRC. Half of Kentucky's games would be played in Cincinnati next year and all of them by the 1974-75 season.

Cincinnati was the home of the Royals of the National Basketball Association until the end of the 1971-72 season, when the franchise was shifted to Kansas City-Omaha.

STILLWAGON LEAVING ARGONAUTS

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have filed a complaint with commissioner Jake Gaudaur of the Canadian Football League that involves tampering charges against Green Bay Packers.

The protest involves Jim Stillwagon, 240-pound import defensive lineman, who recently sold his house in Toronto, withdrew from the CFL pension plan and returned to the United States.

Stillwagon's two-year contract with Toronto is on its option year and if he fails to report to the Argonauts, he would be suspended from playing football in Canada or the U.S.

Penguins Sign Jean Pronovost

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins have announced that veteran Jean Pronovost has agreed to a multi-year contract with the National Hockey League club.

Terms of the pact or its exact length were not revealed.

Reardon in Front

MANCHESTER, England (Reuter) — Ray Reardon of Britain held a narrow 31-29 lead over Australian Eddie Charlton in their 75-frame world professional snooker championship final Friday. Reardon needed to win seven of today's final 15 frames to regain the title he won three years ago.

Rare Collections At Garden Show

Victoria's plant connoisseurs have on display one of the finest collections of rare and unusual plants in B.C. at the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society annual show at Christ Church Memorial Hall, 951 Rockland Avenue.

Judging took place Friday. The show is attracting visitors from all parts of Vancouver Island, Vancouver and Washington. It is open to 9:30 tonight.

One of the major award winners is Mrs. N. S. Lochyer, who received the Dr. C. T. Hilton Cup as the exhibitor with the highest point aggregate.

Col. Keith Dixon won four trophies. He took the Alan Brooks Morkill Trophy for the best native North American alpine or rock garden plant — Doyknia Kamesii; The Dr. Charles A. Watson award for the best Primulas Polyanthus in the show; the VIR and AGS perpetual trophy for the mors meritorious collection of three pans of rock garden plants and the Jack Hibberson Trophy for the best trough garden.

Other winners were: E. W. Lythgoe, Biggerstaff Wilson Trophy for the best plant in show suitable for a rock garden; . Mynkantas, the Christiansen Cup for the rarest plant in the show; Mrs. B. Edgell, Will and Marjorie Pemberton Trophy for the best rhododendron; A. L. Grossi, the Jeffries Cup awarded to the member exhibiting for the first time and receiving the highest aggregate points.

Dianne Whitehead, the Hugh Preece Trophy for the best pan of dwarf bulbs or corms suitable for the rock garden; the Barton Trophy for the best pan of primulas polyanthus grown by an amateur; E. W. Lythgoe, the R. H. Edgell award for the best rhododendron grown by an amateur; and the Lohbrunner Trophy for the best woodland garden plant.

Robbie Reid won the Mrs. H. R. Beaven Cup for the best exhibit in the children's class, 12 years and under; and Carol B. Hutton had the best exhibit in the class 13-to-16 years.

Vitamin Study Grant Sought

A local child psychiatrist, Dr. Phillip Ney, said today he is applying for a grant to conduct a study of vitamin treatment for children with certain emotional problems.

Ney, who is clinical director of the children's unit at the Eric Martin Institute, said he will seek about $25,000 from the Medical Research Council for the study, which could take two years.

Treatment will involve massive doses of vitamins, B3, C, B1 and B6 and is popularly known as megavitamin therapy.

"There have been a lot of wild claims about the efficacy of megavitamins . . . I'm concerned about the lack of evidence," Ney said.

If the study goes ahead, it will be the first of its type he knows of, he said.

Embassy's Orders Killed by Flyers

BANGKOK (UPI) — U.S. air commanders in Thailand have cancelled a number of bombing strikes requested through the U.S. embassy in Cambodia because of danger to populated areas, military sources in Thailand said today.

The sources disclosed the high-level review policy for Cambodian air activity after U.S. senate staff investigators issued a report in Washington Friday that the United States has been flying an average of 242 air sorties each day over Cambodia at the direction of a command post in the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh.

The sources said that as a result of the review at Nakhon Phanom, a number of strikes requested by the embassy in Phnom Penh had been cancelled. They did not give any details of the number of such cases.

They said that two reasons for cancelling strikes were closeness of the targets to villages or other areas where civilians could be hurt, and designation of the strike zones as "cultural areas" where ancient temples are located.

Post-strike reconnaissance pictures have been taken of about half the strikes flown in Cambodia, the sources said. They said there was no indication of damage to civilian areas in the photos.

The sources contended that reports of civilian injuries were exaggerated, but at the same time conceded that in some areas there could be small numbers of civilians not known to be present.

There had been criticism that U.S. air strikes in Cambodia have caused large numbers of civilian casualties in recent weeks. The sources in Thailand contended there were safeguards in effect to prevent such casualties.

PANEL REVIEW

According to the sources, requests for air strikes in Cambodia are fed through the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh, where a mixed civilian and military panel goes over them. Requests that are approved are sent to Nakhon Phanom Air Base in Northeast Thailand.

At Nakhon Phanom, headquarter of 7th Air Force Commander Gen. John W. Vogt Jr. since his departure from Saigon, the requests are gone over again. The sources said reference is made to aerial reconnaissance photos and, in cases where there is any doubt, a forward air controller (FAC) in a spotter plane is sent for a look at the area.

Civilian Prisoners Swapped

Times News Services

BIEN HOA — The Saigon government and the Viet Cong exchanged their first civilian prisoners today, a day after the deadline stipulated in the ceasefire agreement.

The exchange was delayed by a four-hour dispute over the number to be released.

The South Vietnamese, who had announced they would release 400 prisoners, freed only 100, including 35 women. There was no explanation.

The Communists released 63 prisoners loyal to the Saigon regime, including four women.

The Saigon command said more Communist civilian prisoners will be released Monday.

In Saigon, meanwhile, the Viet Cong denied today for the first time that any of their soldiers shot down a helicopter belonging to the international ceasefire commission in which nine persons died when it crashed April 7.

Col. Duong Dinh Thao, a Viet Cong spokesman, told a news conference that Communist units in the area where the helicopter crashed near Khe Sanh were questioned and it was found that none of them fired on the helicopter.

He said the cause of the crash has not yet been positively determined, but suggested that if the helicopter was hot down by a missile, then it was the South Vietnamese who were responsible.

THE GREAT ESQUIMALT UFO CAPER

The Case of the Esquimalt UFO was brought firmly back to earth Friday night.

Residents were intrigued by an eerie light piercing the sky in the early evening and kept police and newspaper switchboards busy.

Old-Time Politics 'Lesson' For Dave

NELSON (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett went back to the people who elected him, touring Friday in near-campaign style.

He took a lesson in politics from a long-time socialist in a private hospital and met soon-to-be civil servants at the Celgar pulp and sawmill in Castlegar.

The premier's political lesson came from Joe Willis, 85, a long-time left-wing activist, who campaigned for Socialist candidates in the early 1900s. Willis was one of dozens of patients at the Willowhaven Private Hospital with whom the premier talked and joked.

Emerging from his meeting with Willis, Premier Barrett turned to newsmen outside the room and said: "You guys should have been in there for a real lesson in British Columbia history."

The premier arrived here in the second stop on a nine-day meet-the-people tour of the province.

The premier's first stop was the Celgar pulp and sawmill where he said he got a "very favorable response" from the workers concerning the government's planned takeover of the mills from its owner, Columbia Cellulose.

"We are very pleased with the enthusiasm the men on the job have towards the purchase of Columbia Cellulose," he said.

The premier told a press conference later in Castlegar he does not think the government will have any trouble bargaining with the workers on contracts.

"We're another employer as a crown corporation and we hope to be a good employer."

Barrett also told the news conference he is pleased Cominco is investigating going ahead on its own with a copper smelter in the Kootenays, but he said the government will not extend any financial aid to help the company build the smelter.

"Cominco doesn't need any hand-outs from us," the premier said, referring to the former Social Credit government's plan to lend Cominco money to establish the smelter.

However, Barrett added, "we would be happy to go in as a partner."

AMMO CARS EXPLODE

ROSEVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — A string of boxcars loaded with ammunition and possibly bombs exploded today in a series of shattering blasts, forcing families to flee their homes and sending giant mushroom-shaped clouds billowing in the air.

An ambulance service reported several injuries, and a spokesman said the injured were being taken to hospitals.

The Sacramento County coroner was called to the scene but there were no immediate reports of deaths.

Police sealed off a five-mile radius area round the explosion scene, a Southern Pacific switching road. Railroad spokesmen said the depot and nearby homes had been evacuated.

"It sounded like a series of repeated blasts, like a war," said one young women resident who fled her home three miles from the SP yard. "There were huge white plumes of gray smoke, like mushrooms, one after another. Each blast shook the earth."

Authorities said no one was allowed near the scene because of the fear that some of the boxcars contained liquified gas.

Southern Pacific said the train was moving from Hawthorne, Nev., to the naval weapons station at Port Chicago, Calif., a shipping point for ammunition headed to the Far East. It included 21 cars of ammunition.

U.S.-BANNED DRUG ON SALE HERE

MONTREAL (CP) — Prescription drugs and patent medicines banned in the United States are still being widely sold in Canada, the president of the Quebec Pharmacists' Association said Friday.

Yves Comtois, whose organization groups 1,900 drug store owners, said, "there are at least 200 products on our shelves that have been withdrawn for various reasons in the U.S."

Examples of medicines sold here but withdrawn in the U.S., he said, were Achrocidine, Tetrax-APC, Bradosol; Spectracin T and Roboxisol.

Nixon Slips Away Again

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — With Watergate problems multiplying, President Richard Nixon again secluded himself for the weekend, this time at his mountaintop retreat after cancelling scheduled talks on the U.S. economy.

Nixon left Washington late Friday by helicopter after returning from an aerial tour of the flood-stricken Mississippi river valley and a dedication ceremony in Meridian, Miss. The White House said he was alone except for customary personal service aides.

With the Watergate scandal taking priority over all other problems facing him, Nixon scrubbed a White House meeting today with top-level advisers on inflation and other economic matters.

Despite reports that he was about to toss overboard key aides such as H. R. Haldeman, his chief of staff, and John D. Ehrlichman, his chief domestic adviser, Nixon invited both key assistants along with him on his Mississippi trip Friday.

He seemed to be expressing his public support for the two aides, despite disclosures that they may have been involved in the cover-up of the Watergate case in which Democratic campaign headquarters were "bugged" prior to last year's presidential election.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren said Nixon would probably be in touch by telephone today with Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and other economic aides, but that it was unlikely any major actions or statements would be made public until the president returned to Washington. He was expected to remain at Camp David at least through Sunday.

With two resignations since Thursday — Jeb Stuart Magruder, former deputy director of the committee to re-elect Nixon, and acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray — most observers were waiting for more to come.

"No matter who was involved in the matter (Watergate), there will be no sparing of anybody," Nixon said as he named William D. Ruckel-

Bilge Dumping Charge Laid

Bob Baird, district marine surveyor for the ministry of transport, said today the case will come up in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

The 13,000-ton Baknes, which sailed for Australia just after midnight, was charged late Thursday after MOT officers boarded her in Victoria and conducted an investigation.

Baird said she is charged under the Canada Shipping Act and oil pollution prevention regulations with discharging oil or an oily mixture into Canadian waters.

The incident is alleged to have occurred between Lion's Gate Bridge and Point Grey off Vancouver as the Baknes sailed for Victoria earlier Thursday.

Maximum penalty on conviction is a fine of $100,000.

Baird said he did not think any oil reached the shore.

The ship is owned by Nile Shipping, is registered in London and is operated by Dennholms, he said.

'Conspiracy' Doubles MD Pay

MONTREAL (CP) — Government health authorities are afraid of doctors and, under a "conspiracy of silence," have allowed them to more than double their incomes during the last 10 years, say two researchers who've been looking into medical incomes.

Dr. Samuel Wolfe, a Canadian teaching medicine in the United States, and Dr. Robin Badgley, chairman of the behavioral science department at the University of Toronto, told a meeting Friday of the Canadian Public Health Association that federal and provincial governments have "a deliberate conspiracy of silence" to keep the public from learning the truth about doctors' high incomes.

Governments are afraid of doctors and of possible doctors' strikes, they told the meeting.

As well, the doctors who do the most work are not, under the existing fee-for-service method of payment, necessarily those who get paid the most, the two researchers said. The fee method is weighted in favor of those who do surgery and technical procedures rather than the family doctors.

The two doctors recently completed a book on the medical profession and medical income, called Family Doctor. It is to be released shortly and many of the statistics from their studies will be included, Dr. Wolfe said.

Average yearly medical incomes for doctors receiving fees rose to $50,800 gross in 1970, compared with $24,300 in 1960, the two doctors said in their speech. The net income for doctors receiving fees was $34,000 in 1970, compared with $15,700 in 1960.

Differences between the earnings of doctors and of other professional workers such as dentists and lawyers also widened in the 10-year period, Dr. Wolfe said.

"The average net income of a taxable Canadian worker was $4,000 in 1960 and $6,500 in 1970," he added. "Physicians earned four times as much as the average workers in 1960 and five times as much in 1970."

What's more, said Dr. Wolfe, their studies have shown that doctors who see patients quickly and carry out more procedures instead of talking or listening with their patients earn more.

In other words, some doctors can "rake-off" the system, getting more for a lower quality of care.

The doctors said that because the medical care insurance commissions have more doctors representatives than public representatives, the administrators become "handmaidens to the interests of the medical profession."

"Governments are weak in negotiating with a strong profession, a stance singularly opposite to that taken in dealing with school teachers, universities or low-paid hospital workers."

Information has been deliberately withheld from the Canadian public by both federal and provincial governments, they said.

"Each province gets reasonable good statistics, tends to hide the information from the public, but makes it available to the doctors."

Dr. Wolfe, now a professor of medicine at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn., was one of the health officials in Saskatchewan who helped implement the first government medical care insurance program in North America. He more recently has been a consultant on proposals to introduce more community health centres.

They said the "fee-for-service" method of paying doctors encourages abuses of the medical care insurance system and raises health costs.

It also leads to unnecessary visits for patients and probably even some unnecessary surgery, the two researchers told the Canadian Public Health Association meeting in a joint presentation.

BRA HAZARD

LONDON (UPI) — Brassieres will be banned when girls of the British Broadcasting Corp. meet their male colleagues in a rugby match Sunday, organizer Jim Newson said today. "It was decided that the bra wires could be dangerous," Newsom said. "The girls have been training seriously and want no holds barred."

BUTTER WORSE THAN BOOZE

COVENTRY, England (Reuter) — Eating butter is worse for your heart than drinking liquor, a medical conference was told today.

The finding resulted from a survey of blood composition among people living in London, Naples, Geneva and Uppsala, Sweden.

Londoners appeared to have a remarkably high level of cholesterol and other blood fats generally credited with causing heart disease. In Naples, the blood fat levels were particularly low.

Reporting the survey to a meeting of the British Medical Association, Dr. Barry Lewis of London's Hammersmith Hospital said fatty foods, carbohydrates and alcohol have all been identified as agents for increasing cholesterol.

But the difference between London, where butter and other fatty foods are popular, and Naples, where wine is cheap and plentiful, showed that "booze is less bad than butter" where the heart is concerned, Dr. Lewis said.

The Mystery Is So Easy to Understand

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The disciples could not understand what had happened. Jesus had warned them that he must die, but they hadn't believed him: they thought he had been speaking in riddles, using figurative language with hidden meanings.

It had happened so quickly. One of them betrayed him to the authorities. Then the sudden trials before the Sanhedrin and the Roman governor. With great haste he was hanged on a cross — and in three hours he was dead.

This is not what the disciples had expected. They didn't know what to make of it. Their Master, whom they believed to be the Messiah sent by God for the salvation of all men, had been ignominiously put to death as a common criminal. And they began to fear for their own safety: after all, they had been his accomplices.

Then on the third day some of Jesus' women followers went to the tomb in which his body had been laid, taking with them spices for the neglected office of embalmment. They found that the stone which closed the tomb had been rolled away. They stood there, incredulous and perplexed and frightened.

Then, as Luke reports, two men in dazzling apparel appeared and said to them, "Why do you seek the living among the dead? He is not here, but has risen."

The women then went to the disciples and told them about this. But, Luke tells, "These words seemed to them an idle tale, and they did not believe them."

Slowly the disciples came out of their despair and doubt and came to accept the fact that the crucifixion was not the end of Jesus. And it was out of the disciples' awareness of the risen Christ, out of their experience of the Resurrection, that came the Christian faith and the Christian Church.

The details of the Resurrection are shrouded in the mists of history. There are serious inconsistencies in the accounts of it given in the four Gospels. The "how" of the Resurrection we cannot determine. But the reality of the Resurrection-experience of the followers of Jesus persists. The rise of the Christian movement, including the writing and selection of the documents which comprise the New Testament, can be accounted for only in terms of the Resurrection-experience.

Christian faith is not simply a matter of approving a body of teaching given out by a great man nearly 20 centuries ago. The Church is not simply a memorial society, a sort of Jesus fan-club. The Church is the community of the Resurrection, a fellowship created by the power of the Rusurrection which has been sustained through the centuries by expe*rience of its living Lord.* That is the reality of Easter.

Former Fiji Policeman Hotfoots After the Tourist Dollar

By RANDI ROSENBLUM

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Fereimi Waqa from Beqa used to walk on fire for God. Now he does it for the tourists.

And an ex-policeman with a wild aloha shirt and a Fiji skirt explains it all to the tourists in a heavy New Zealand accent.

Duty-free shops line the streets of the Victorian town of Suva. New hotels border the stately waterfront of the former British colony.

Tourism, officials explain, is the only industry that can expand fast enough to provide jobs for more than 10,000 young people who graduate from school each year.

As island paradises go, this South Pacific island, 1,200 miles east of Australia, is second only to Tahiti. But unlike other paradises, it has no season—just a steady rush.

One of Fiji's chief assets is its people. "Our whole image of friendliness goes away if tourists don't mix with the locals," says an official of the Visitors Bureau.

The islands' half million residents usually are willing to share their lives and customs with strangers. But some customs change in the process.

RULES MODIFIED

When the people of Beqa Island decided several years ago to do their famous firewalking for the tourists they had to change some of the rules.

In times past, a fire-walker had to abstain from sex and coconuts for two weeks before the ritual. With a show somewhere in Fiji six times a week, they now get only four days' abstinence between shows.

"After you walk on fire, you feel different—changed," mused one old Beqa man. "But when it's for tourists, it's not the same."

The Visitors Bureau has a vigorous policy to help promote more contact between the islanders and their guests. It publishes two booklets, one with a cover drawing of coins marching called The Tide Is Coming In, explaining to Fijians what's in it for them as tourism expands.

"When you hear of 100 new hotel rooms, you'll know that there are new jobs for 150 people," it says.

Last year Fiji added 600 new rooms for a total of nearly 3,000, a huge jump from the 388 rooms 10 years earlier.

MOST NEAR SUVA

Most of the 70-odd hotels are on the main island of Viti Levu, clustering around the capital of Suva. And most have been put up with foreign money.

Land on the 106 inhabited islands of the Fiji group generally is held communally and cannot be sold. Hotels lease the land from the villages.

"This way we make sure of local involvement," says an official.

Privately-held land is rare but some investors have been lucky, including TV actor Raymond Burr who owns an island retreat off Suva.

It was hoped that Fijians would build vacation homes and rent them to tourists in a 1,500-acre development at Pacific Harbor, 26 miles to the south. But local response has been poor and most of the homesites have been sold to Londoners looking for vacation homes.

"Now there is some government trepidation that Pacific Harbor is going to turn into a big enclave of wealth and whiteness," observed one long-time resident.

COVERED ICE RINK FOR ARCTIC TOWN

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — A community centre will be built at Cambridge Bay on Victoria Island, 180 miles above the Arctic Circle, the territorial government announced today. The centre, expected to cost more than $250,000, will include a three-sheet curling rink, an ice arena, an adult education centre, settlement council offices, radio broadcasting facilities, a public library and a lounge. Hugh Stevenson, area supervisor of local government, said the community has raised $95,000 and plans to finance the remainder through various grant systems.
